The Scriptures and SIN

There is grave reason to believe that much Bible reading and Bible study of the last few years has been of no spiritual profit to those who engaged in it. Yes, we go further; we greatly fear that in many instances it has proved a curse rather than a blessing. This is strong language, we are well aware, yet no stronger than the case calls for. Divine gifts may be misused, and Divine mercies abused. That this has been so in the present instance, is evident by the fruits produced. Even the natural man may (and often does) take up the study of the Scriptures with the same enthusiasm and pleasure as he might of the sciences. Where this is the case, his store of knowledge is increased, and so also is his pride. Like a scientist engaged in making interesting experiments, the intellectual searcher of the Word is quite elated when he makes some discovery in it; but the joy of the latter is no more spiritual than would be that of the former. Again, just as the successes of the scientist generally increase his sense of self-importance and cause him to look with disdain upon others less knowledgeable than himself—so alas, is it often the case with those who have investigated Bible numerics, typology, prophecy and other such subjects.

The Word of God may be taken up from various motives. Some read it to satisfy their literary pride. In certain circles it has become both the respectable and popular thing to obtain a general acquaintance with the contents of the Bible, simply because it is regarded as an educational defect to be ignorant of them. Some read it to satisfy their sense of curiosity, as they might any other book of note. Others read it to satisfy their sectarian pride. They consider it a duty to be well versed in the particular tenets of their own denomination and so search eagerly for proof-texts in support of "our doctrines." Yet others read it for the purpose of being able to argue successfully with those who differ from them. But in all this, there is no thought of God, no yearning for spiritual edification—and therefore no real benefit to the soul.

Of what, then, does a true profiting from the Word consist? Does not 2 Timothy 3:16,17 furnish a clear answer to our question? There we read, "All Scripture is God-breathed and is useful for teaching, rebuking, correcting and training in righteousness, so that the man of God may be thoroughly equipped for every good work."

Observe what is here omitted: the Holy Scriptures are given us not for intellectual gratification or carnal speculation, but to furnish unto "every good work," and that by teaching, reproof and correcting us. Let us endeavor to amplify this by the help of other passages.

1. An individual is spiritually profited, when the Word convicts him of sin. This is its first office: to reveal our depravity, to expose our vileness, to make known our wickedness. A man's moral life may be irreproachable, and his dealings with his fellows may be faultless; but when the Holy Spirit applies the Word to his heart and conscience, opening his sin-blinded eyes to see his relation and attitude to God, he cries, "Woe is me, for I am undone!" It is in this way that each truly saved soul is brought to realize his need of Christ. "Those who are whole need not a physician, but those who are sick" (Luke 5:31). Yet it is not until the Spirit applies the Word in divine power, that any individual is made to feel that he is sin-sick, sick unto death.

Such conviction that brings home to the heart that the awful ravages which sin has wrought in each person, is not to be restricted to the initial experience which immediately precedes conversion. Each time that God blesses His Word to my heart, I am made to feel how far, far short I come from the standard which He has set before me, namely, "But just as He who called you is holy—so be holy in all you do" (1 Peter 1:15).

Here, then, is the first test to apply: As I read of the woeful failures of different ones in Scripture, does it make me realize how sadly like unto them I am? As I read of the blessed and perfect life of Christ, does it make me recognize how terribly unlike Him I am?

2. An individual is spiritually profited, when the Word makes him sorrow over sin. Of the stony-ground hearer it is said that he "hears the Word and at once receives it with joy. But since he has no root, he lasts only a short time. When trouble or persecution comes because of the Word, he quickly falls away. (Matthew 13:20-21). But of those who were convicted under the preaching of Peter, it is recorded that they were cut to the heart (Acts 2:37).

The same contrast exists today. Many will listen to a flowery sermon, or an address on "prophecy" that displays oratorical powers or exhibits the intellectual skill of the speaker—but which, usually, contains no searching application to the conscience. It is received with approbation, but no one is humbled before God or brought into a closer walk with Him through it.

But let a faithful servant of the Lord (who by grace is not seeking to acquire a reputation for his "brilliance") bring the teaching of Scripture to bear upon character and conduct, exposing the sad failures of even the best of God's people—and though the crowd will despise the messenger, the truly regenerate will be thankful for the message which causes them to mourn before God and cry, "Oh, what a wretched man that I am!"

So it is in the private reading of the Word. It is when the Holy Spirit applies it in such a way that I am made to see and feel my inward corruptions, that I am really blessed.

What a word is that in Jeremiah 31:19: "After I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh; I was ashamed, yes, even confounded." Do you, my reader, know anything of such an experience? Does your study of the Word produce a broken heart and lead to a humbling of yourself before God? Does it convict you of your sins in such a way that you are brought to daily repentance before Him? The paschal lamb had to be eaten with "bitter herbs" (Exodus 12:8); so as we really feed on the Word, the Holy Spirit makes it "bitter" to us before it becomes sweet to our taste.

Note the order in Revelation 10:9, "So I went to the angel and asked him to give me the little scroll. He said to me, "Take it and eat it. It will be bitter in your stomach, but in your mouth it will be as sweet as honey." This is ever the experimental order: there must be mourning, before comfort (Matthew 5:4); humbling, before exalting (1 Peter 5:6).

3. An individual is spiritually profited, when the Word leads to confession of sin. The Scriptures are profitable for "reproof" (2 Timothy 3:16), and an honest soul will acknowledge its faults. Of the lost it is said, "For everyone who loves evil hates the light, neither comes to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved" (John 3:20). "God be merciful to me a sinner!" is the cry of a renewed heart, and every time we are quickened by the Word (Psalm 119) there is a fresh revealing to us and a fresh owning by us of our transgressions before God. "He who covers his sins shall not prosper; but whoever confesses and forsakes them shall have mercy" (Proverbs 28:13). There can be no spiritual prosperity or fruitfulness (Psalm 1:3) while we conceal within our bosoms our guilty secrets; only as they are freely owned before God, and that in detail, shall we enjoy His mercy.

There is no real peace for the conscience and no rest for the heart, while we cherish unconfessed sin. Relief comes when it is fully unbosomed to God. Mark well the experience of David, "When I kept silent, my bones wasted away through my groaning all day long. For day and night your hand was heavy upon me; my strength was sapped as in the heat of summer." (Psalm 32:3-4). Is this figurative but forcible language unintelligible unto you? Or does your own spiritual history explain it? There is many a verse of Scripture which no commentary but that of personal experience can satisfactorily interpret. Blessed indeed is the immediate sequel here: "Then I acknowledged my sin to you and did not cover up my iniquity. I said, "I will confess my transgressions to the LORD"—and You forgave the guilt of my sin." (Psalm 32:5).

4. An individual is spiritually profited, when the Word produces in him a deeper hatred of sin. "You who love the Lord, hate evil" (Psalm 97: 10). "We cannot love God without hating that which He hates. We are not only to avoid evil, and refuse to continue in it—but we must be up in arms against it, and bear towards it a hearty indignation" (Spurgeon). One of the surest tests to apply to the professed conversion, is the heart's attitude towards sin. Where the principle of holiness has been implanted, there will necessarily be a loathing of all that is unholly. If our hatred of evil is genuine, we are thankful when the Word reproves even the evil which we suspected not.

This was the experience of David: "Through your precepts I get understanding; therefore I hate every false way" (Psalm 119:104). Observe well, it is not merely "I abstain from," but "I hate". Not only "some" or "many," but "every false way". And not only "every evil," but "every false way." "Therefore I esteem all your precepts concerning all things to be right, and I hate every false way" (Psalm 119:128).

But it is the very opposite with the wicked: "Seeing you hate instruction, and cast my Words behind you" (Psalm 50:17). In Proverbs 8:13, we read, "The fear of the Lord is to hate evil," and this godly fear comes through reading the Word; see Deuteronomy 17:18, 19. Rightly has it been said, "Until sin is hated—it cannot be mortified. You will never cry against it, as the Jews did against Christ, Crucify it, Crucify it!—until sin is really as abhorred as He was" (Edward Reyner, 1635).

5. An individual is spiritually profited, when the Word causes a forsaking of sin. "Let every one who names the name of Christ depart from iniquity" (2 Timothy 2:19). The more the Word is read with the definite object of discovering what is pleasing and what is displeasing to the Lord, the more will His will become known; and if our hearts are right with Him the more will our ways be conformed thereto. There will be a "walking in the truth" (3 John 4).

At the close of 2 Corinthians 6 some precious promises are given to those who separate themselves from unbelievers. Observe, there, the application which the Holy Spirit makes of them. He does not say, "Since we have these promises—be comforted and become complacent thereby"—but "Since we have these promises—let us purify ourselves from everything that contaminates body and spirit, perfecting holiness out of reverence for God." (2 Corinthians 7:1).

"Now you are clean through the Word which I have spoken unto you" (John 15:3). Here is another important rule by which we should frequently test ourselves: Is the reading and studying of God's Word producing a purging of my ways? Of old the question was asked, "How shall a young man cleanse his way?" and the Divine answer is "by taking heed thereto according to your Word." Yes, not simply by reading, believing, or memorizing it, but by the personal application of the Word to our "way." It is by taking heed to such exhortations as:

- "Flee sexual immorality" (1 Corinthians 6:18),
- "Flee from idolatry" (1 Corinthians 10:14),
- "Flee these things"—a covetous love for money (1 Timothy 6:11),
- "Flee also youthful lusts" (2 Timothy 2:22)—that the Christian is brought into practical separation from evil; for sin has not only to be confessed, but forsaken. (Proverbs 28:13).

6. An individual is spiritually profited, when the Word fortifies against sin. The Holy Scriptures are given to us not only for the purpose of revealing our innate sinfulness, and the many, many ways in which we "come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23)—but also to teach us how to obtain deliverance from sin, and how to be kept from displeasing God. "Your Word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against You" (Psalm 119:11).

This is what each of us is required to do: "Accept instruction from His mouth and lay up His Words in your heart." (Job 22:22). It is particularly the commandments, the warnings, the exhortations—which we need to make our own and to treasure. We need to memorize them, meditate upon them, pray over them, and put them into practice. The only effective way of keeping a plot of ground from being overgrown by weeds, is to sow good seed therein: "Do not be overcome by evil, but overcome evil with good." (Romans 12:21). So the more Christ's Word dwells in us "richly" (Colossians 3:16), the less room will there be for the exercise of sin in our hearts and lives.

It is not sufficient merely to assent to the veracity of the Scriptures—they require to be received into the affections. It is unspeakably solemn to note that the Holy Spirit specifies as the ground of apostasy, "They perish because they refused to love the truth and so be saved." (2 Thessalonians 2:10). "If truth lies only in the tongue or in the mind, only to make it a matter of talk and speculation—it will soon be gone. The seed which lies on the surface, the birds in the air will pick up. Therefore hide it deeply; let it get from the ear into the mind, from the mind into the heart; let it soak in further and further. It is only when Scripture has a prevailing sovereignty in the heart, that we receive truth in the love of it—when it is dearer than our dearest lust, then it will stick to us" (Thomas Manton).

Nothing else will . . .

preserve from the infections of this world, deliver from the temptations of Satan, and be so effective a preservative against sin—

as the Word of God received into the affections, "The law of his God is in his heart—none of his steps shall slide" (Psalm 37:31). As long as the truth is active within us, stirring the conscience, and is really loved by us—we shall be kept from falling.

When Joseph was tempted by Potiphar's wife, he said, "How then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?" (Genesis 39:9). The Word was in his heart, and therefore had prevailing power over his lusts. Joseph loved the ineffable holiness, and the mighty power of God, who is able both to save and to destroy.

None of us knows when he may be tempted, therefore it is necessary to be prepared against it. Yes, we are to anticipate the future and be fortified against it, by storing up the Word in our hearts for coming emergencies. "I have hidden Your Word in my heart, that I might not sin against You." (Psalm 119:11)

7. An individual is spiritually profited, when the Word causes him to practice the opposite of sin. "Sin is the transgression of the law" (1 John 3:4).

God says "You shall."

Sin says "I will not!"

God says "You shall not."

Sin says "I will!"

Thus, sin is rebellion against God, the determination to have my own way (Isaiah 53:6). Therefore sin is a species of anarchy in the spiritual realm, and may be likened unto the waving of the war flag in the face of God. Now the opposite of sinning against God, is submission to Him; as the opposite of lawlessness, is subjection to the law. Thus, to practice the opposition of sin, is to walk in the path of obedience.

This is another chief reason why the Scriptures were given—to make known the path which is pleasing to God for us. They are profitable not only for reproof and correction, but also for "instruction in righteousness."

Here, then, is another important rule by which we should frequently test ourselves. Are my thoughts being formed, my heart controlled, and my ways and works regulated by God's Word? This is what the Lord requires: "Do not merely listen to the Word, and so deceive yourselves. Do what it says!" (James 1:22). This is how gratitude to and affection for Christ are to be expressed: "If you love Me, you will keep My commandments" (John 14:15).

For this, Divine assistance is needed. David prayed, "Make me to walk in the path of Your commandments" (Psalm 119:35). "We need not only light to know our way, but a heart to walk in it. Direction is necessary because of the blindness of our minds; and grace is necessary because of the weakness of our hearts. It will not answer our duty to have a mere notion of truths, unless we embrace and pursue them" (Manton). Note it is "the path of Your commandments." Not a self-chosen course, but a definitely marked-out one. Not a public "road," but a private "path."

Let both reader honestly and diligently measure himself, as in the presence of God, by the seven things here enumerated:

Has your study of the Bible made you more humble, or more proud—proud of the knowledge you have acquired?

Has it raised you in the esteem of your fellow men, or has it led you to take a lower place before God?

Has it produced in you a deeper abhorrence and loathing of self, or has it made you more complacent?

Has it caused those you mingle with, or perhaps teach, to say, I wish I had your knowledge of the Bible; or does it cause you to pray, Lord give me the faith, the grace, the holiness You have granted my friend, or teacher?

"Meditate on these things; give yourself entirely to them, that your progress may be evident to all." (1 Timothy 4:15).

The Scriptures and GOD

The Holy Scriptures are wholly supernatural. They are a Divine revelation. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God" (2 Timothy 3:16). It is not merely that God elevated the minds of the Scripture writers, but that He directed their thoughts. It is not simply that He communicated concepts to them, but that He dictated the very words they used. "The prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (2 Peter 1:21). Any "theory" which denies the verbal inspiration of Scripture is a device of Satan's—an attack upon God's truth. The Divine image is stamped upon every page. Writings so holy, so heavenly, so awe-producing, could not have been created by man.

PART A.

1. The Scriptures make known a supernatural God. That may be a very trite remark, yet today it needs making. The "God" which is believed in by many professing Christians is becoming more and more paganized. The prominent place which "sports" now has in the nation's life, the excessive love of pleasure, the breaking down of home-life, the brazen immodesty of women, are so many symptoms of the same disease which brought about the downfall and death of the empires of Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome. And the twentieth-century idea of God which is entertained by the majority of people in nominally "Christian" lands is rapidly approximating to the character ascribed to the gods of the ancients. In sharp contrast therewith, the God of Holy Writ is clothed with such perfections and vested with such attributes that no mere human intellect could possibly have invented them.

2. God can only be known by means of a supernatural revelation of Himself. Apart from the Scriptures, even a theoretical acquaintance with Him is impossible. It still holds true that "the world by its wisdom knew not God" (1 Corinthians 1:21). Where the Scriptures are ignored, God is "the unknown God" (Acts 17:23). But something more than the Scriptures is required before the soul can know God—know Him in a real, personal, vital way. This seems to be recognized by few today.

The prevailing practice assumes that a knowledge of God can be obtained through studying the Word, in the same way as a knowledge of chemistry may be secured by mastering its textbooks. An intellectual knowledge of God perhaps—not so a spiritual one. A supernatural God can only be known supernaturally (that is, known in a manner above that which mere nature can acquire), by a supernatural revelation of Himself to the heart. "God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, has shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ" (2 Corinthians 4:6).

3. God can only be known through a supernatural faculty. Christ made this clear when He said, "Unless a man is born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3). The unregenerate have no spiritual knowledge of God. "The natural man receives not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (1 Corinthians 2:14). Water, of itself, never rises above its own level. Just so, the natural man is incapable of perceiving that which transcends mere nature. "This is life eternal, that they might know You the only true God" (John 17:3). Eternal life must be imparted before the "true God" can be known. Plainly is this affirmed in 1 John 5:20, "We know that the Son of God has come, and has given us an understanding, that we may know Him that is true." Yes, an "understanding," a spiritual understanding, by new creation, must be given before God can be known in a spiritual way.

4. A supernatural knowledge of God produces a supernatural experience, and this is something to which multitudes of church members are total strangers. Most of the "religion" of the day is but a touching up of "old Adam." It is merely a garnishing of sepulchers full of corruption. It is an outward "form." Even where there is a sound creed, only too often it is a dead orthodoxy. Nor should this be wondered at. It has ever been thus. It was so when Christ was here upon earth. The Jews were very orthodox. At that time they were free from idolatry. The temple stood at Jerusalem, the Law was expounded, and Jehovah was worshipped.

And yet Christ said to them, "He who sent Me is true, whom you know not." (John 7:28). "You neither know Me, nor My Father; if you had known Me, you would have known My Father also" (John 8:19). "It is my Father who honors Me; of whom you say that He is your God. Yet you have not known Him" (John 8:54,55). And mark it well, this is said to a people who had the Scriptures, searched them diligently, and venerated them as God's Word! They were well acquainted with God theoretically, but they had not a spiritual knowledge of Him.

As it was in the Jewish world, so it is in Christendom. Multitudes who "believe" in the Holy Trinity are completely devoid of a supernatural or spiritual knowledge of God. How are we so sure of this? In this way: the character of the fruit reveals the character of the tree that bears it; the nature of the waters makes known the nature of the fountain from which they flow.

5. A supernatural knowledge of God produces a supernatural experience, and a supernatural experience results in supernatural fruit. God actually dwelling in the heart, revolutionizes and transforms the life. There is that brought forth which mere nature cannot produce, yes, that which is directly contrary thereto. And this is noticeably absent from the lives of perhaps ninety-five out of every hundred now professing to be God's children. There is nothing in the life of the average professing Christian except what can be accounted for on natural grounds. But in the genuine child of God it is far otherwise. He is, in truth, a miracle of grace; he is a "new creature in Christ Jesus" (2 Corinthians 5:17). His experience, his life, is supernatural.

6. The supernatural experience of the Christian is seen in his attitude toward God. Having within him the life of God, having been made a "partaker of the Divine nature" (2 Peter 1:4)—he necessarily loves God, loves the things of God, loves what God loves; and, contrariwise, he hates what God hates.

This supernatural experience is wrought in him by the Spirit of God, and by means of the Word of God. The Spirit never works apart from the Word. By that Word He quickens. By that Word He produces conviction of sin. By that Word He sanctifies. By that Word He gives assurance. By that Word He makes the saint to grow. Thus each one of us may ascertain the extent to which we are profiting from our reading and studying of the Scriptures by the effects which they are, through the Spirit's application of them, producing in us. Let us enter now into details.

PART B.

1. We profit from our study of the Scriptures, when we have a greater submission to God's claims. The great controversy between the Creator and the creature has been whether He or they should be God, whether His wisdom or theirs should be the guiding principle of their actions, whether His will or theirs should be supreme. That which brought about the fall of Lucifer was his resentment at being in subjection to his Maker: "You have said in your heart, I will ascend into Heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God . . . I will be like the most High" (Isaiah 14:13, 14).

The lie of the serpent which lured our first parents to their destruction was, "You shall be as gods" (Genesis 3:5). And ever since then the heart-sentiment of the natural man has been, "Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of Your ways. Who is the Almighty, that we should serve Him?" (Job 21:14,15). "Our lips are our own; who is Lord over us?" (Psalm 12:4). "We are lords; we will come no more unto You" (Jeremiah 2:31).

Sin has alienated man from God (Ephesians 4:18). His heart is averse to Him, his will is opposed to God's will, his mind is at enmity against Him. Contrariwise, salvation means being restored to God: "For Christ also has once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God" (1 Peter 3:18). Legally that has already been done; experimentally it is in the process of accomplishment.

Salvation means being reconciled to God; and that involves and includes sin's dominion over us being broken, enmity within us being slain, the heart being won to God. This is what true conversion is: it is a tearing down of every idol, a renouncing of the empty vanities of a cheating world, and taking God for our portion, our ruler, our all in all. Of the Corinthians we read that they "first gave their own selves unto the Lord" (2 Corinthians 8:5). The desire and determination of those truly converted is that they "should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him who died for them, and rose again" (2 Corinthians 5:15).

God's claims are now recognized, His rightful dominion over us is acknowledged, and He is owned as God. The converted yield themselves "unto God, as those that are alive from the dead," and their members as "instruments of righteousness unto God" (Romans 6:13). This is the demand which He makes upon us: to be our God, to be served as such by us; for us to be and do, absolutely and without reserve, whatever He demands, surrendering ourselves fully to Him (see Luke 14:26,27,33). It belongs to God as God—to legislate, prescribe, and determine for us. It belongs to us as a bounded duty—to be ruled, governed, and disposed of by Him at His pleasure.

To own God as our God, is to give Him the throne of our hearts. It is to say in the language of Isaiah 26:13, "O LORD, our God, other lords besides You have ruled over us, but Your name alone do we honor." It is to declare with the Psalmist, not hypocritically, but sincerely, "O God, You are my God; early will I seek You" (Psalm 63:1).

Now it is in proportion as this becomes our actual experience, that we profit from the Scriptures. It is in them, and in them alone, that the claims of God are revealed and enforced, and just so far as we are obtaining clearer and fuller views of God's rights, and are yielding ourselves thereto—are we really being blessed.

2. We profit from our study of the Scriptures, when we have a greater fear of God's majesty. "Let all the earth fear the Lord; let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of Him" (Psalm 33:8). God is so high above us that the thought of His majesty should make us tremble. His power is so great that the realization of it ought to terrify us. He is so ineffably holy, and His abhorrence of sin is so infinite, that the very thought of wrongdoing ought to fill us with horror. "God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints, and to be had in reverence by those who are about Him" (Psalm 89:7).

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom" (Proverbs 9:10), and "wisdom" is a right use of knowledge. Just so far as God is truly known, will He be duly feared. Of the wicked it is written, "There is no fear of God before their eyes" (Romans 3:18). They have.

no realization of His majesty,
no concern for His authority,
no respect for His commandments,
no alarm that He shall judge them.

But concerning His Covenant people God has promised, "I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me" (Jeremiah 32:40). Therefore do they tremble at His Word (Isaiah 66:5), and walk softly before Him.

"The fear of the Lord is to hate evil" (Proverbs 8:13). And again, "By the fear of the Lord, men depart from evil" (Proverbs 16:6). The man who lives in the fear of God is conscious that "the eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good"

(Proverbs 15:3), therefore is he conscientious about his private conduct as well as his public conduct. The one who is deterred from committing certain sins because the eyes of men are upon him, and who hesitates not to commit them when alone, is destitute of the fear of God. So too the man who watches his language when Christians are about him, but does not so at other times—is devoid of God's fear. He has no awe-inspiring consciousness that God sees and hears him at all times. The truly regenerate soul is afraid of disobeying and defying God. Nor does he want to. No, his real and deepest desire is to please Him in all things, at all times, and in all places. His earnest prayer is "Teach me Your way, O LORD, and I will walk in Your truth. Give me an undivided heart, that I may fear Your name." (Psalm 86:11).

Now even the saint has to be taught the fear of God (Psalm 34:11). And here, as ever, it is through the Scriptures that this teaching is given us (Proverbs 2:5). It is through them we learn that God's eye is ever upon us, marking our actions, weighing our motives. As the Holy Spirit applies the Scriptures to our hearts, we give increasing heed to that command, "Live in the fear of the Lord always" (Proverbs 23:17).

Thus, just so far as we are awed by God's solemn majesty, live in the awareness of God's omniscience, and work out our salvation with "fear and trembling" (Philippians 2:12)—are we truly profited from our reading and study of the Bible.

3. We profit from our study of the Scriptures, when we have a deeper reverence for God's commandments. Sin entered this world by Adam's breaking of God's law, and all his fallen children are begotten in his depraved likeness (Genesis 5:3). Sin is the transgression of God's law (1 John 3:4). Sin is a species of high treason; it is spiritual anarchy. It is the repudiation of God's dominion, the setting aside of His authority, and rebellion against His will. Sin is having our own way.

Salvation is deliverance from sin—from its guilt, from its power as well as its penalty. The same Spirit who convicts of the need of God's grace for salvation, also convicts of the need of God's government to rule us. God's promise to His Covenant people is, "I will put My laws in their minds and write them on their hearts. I will be their God, and they will be My people." (Hebrews 8:10).

A spirit of obedience is communicated to every regenerated soul. Said Christ, "If any man loves Me, he will obey My words" (John 14:23). Here is the test, "By this we know that we have come to know Him: if we keep His commandments." (1 John 2:3). None of us keeps them perfectly, yet every real Christian both desires and strives to do so. He says with Paul, "I delight in the law of God after the inward man" (Romans 7:22). He says with the Psalmist, "I have chosen the way of truth." "Oh, how I love Your law! I meditate on it all day long." (Psalm 119:30,97). Christ has saved them from the wrath of God, but not from His government. "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart" never has been and never will be repealed.

"He who says he abides in Him ought himself so to walk, even as He walked" (1 John 2:6). And how did Christ "walk"? In perfect obedience to God; in complete subjection to His law, honoring and obeying it in thought and word and deed. And our love for Him is expressed, not in pleasing emotions or beautiful words—but in keeping His commandments (John 14:15), and the commandments of Christ are the commandments of God (cf. Exodus 20:6). The earnest prayer of the real Christian is, "Make me to walk in the path of your commandments; for therein do I delight" (Psalm 119:35).

Just so far as our reading and study of Scripture is, by the Spirit's application, begetting within us a greater love and a deeper respect for and a more punctual keeping of God's commandments—are we really profiting thereby.

4. We profit from our study of the Scriptures, when we have a firmer trust in God's sufficiency. Whatever or whoever a man most trusts in, is his "God." Some trust in health, others in wealth; some in self, others in their friends. That which characterizes all the unregenerate is that they lean upon an arm of flesh. But true believers have their hearts drawn from all creature supports, to rest upon the living God. God's people are the children of faith. The language of their hearts is, "O my God, I trust in You: let me not be ashamed" (Psalm 25:2). And again, "Though He slays me, yet will I trust in Him" (Job 13:15). They rely upon God to provide, protect and bless them. They . . .

look to an unseen resource,
count upon an invisible God, and lean upon a hidden arm.

True, there are times when their faith wavers, but though they fall they are not utterly cast down. Though it is not be their uniform experience, yet Psalm 56:11 expresses the general state of their souls: "In God have I put my trust: I will not be afraid what man can do unto me." Their earnest prayer is, "Lord, increase our faith." "Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God" (Romans 10:17).

Thus, as the Scriptures are pondered—their promises received in the mind, faith is strengthened, confidence in God is increased, and assurance is deepened. By this we may discover whether or not we are profiting from our study of the Bible.

5. We profit from our study of the Scriptures, when we have a fuller delight in God's perfections. That in which a man most delights is his "God." The poor worldling seeks satisfaction in his pursuits, pleasures and possessions. Ignoring the substance, he vainly pursues the shadows. But the Christian delights in the wondrous perfections of God. Really to own God as our God is not only to submit to His scepter, but is to love Him more than the world, to value Him above everything and everyone else. It is to have with the Psalmist an experiential realization that "all my springs are in you" (Psalm 87:7). The redeemed have not only received a joy from God such as this poor world cannot impart, but they "rejoice in God" (Romans 5:11); and of this the poor worldling knows nothing. The language of the true believer is, "the Lord is my portion!" (Lamentations 3:24).

Spiritual exercises are irksome to the flesh. But the real Christian says, "It is good for me to draw near to God" (Psalm 73:28). The carnal man has many worldly cravings and ambitions; but the regenerate soul declares, "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after—that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord" (Psalm 27:4). And why? Because the true sentiment of his heart is, "Whom have I in Heaven but You? And earth has nothing I desire besides You. My flesh and my heart may fail, but God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever!" (Psalm 73:25,26). Ah, my reader, if your heart has not been drawn out to love and delight in God, then it is still dead toward Him.

The language of the saints is, "Even though the fig trees have no blossoms, and there are no grapes on the vines; even though the olive crop fails, and the fields lie empty and barren; even though the flocks die in the fields, and the cattle barns are empty—yet I will rejoice in the LORD! I will be joyful in the God of my salvation!" (Habakkuk 3:17,18).

Ah, that is a supernatural experience indeed! Yes, the Christian can rejoice when all his worldly possessions are taken from him (see Hebrews 10:34). When he lies in a dungeon with his back bleeding, he can still sing praises to God (see Acts 16:25).

Thus, to the extent that you are being weaned from the empty pleasures of this world, are learning that there is no blessing outside of God, are discovering that He is the source and sum of all excellency, and your heart is being drawn out to Him, your mind stayed on Him, your soul finding its joy and satisfaction in Him—are you really profiting from the Scriptures.

6. We profit from our study of the Scriptures, when we have a larger submission to God's providences. It is natural to murmur when things go wrong, it is supernatural not to complain: "I was silent; I would not open my mouth—for You are the one who has done this." (Psalm 39:9) It is natural to be disappointed when our plans miscarry, it is supernatural to bow to His appointments. It is natural to want our own way, it is supernatural to say, "Not my will, but may Your will be done." It is natural to rebel when a loved one is taken from us by death, it is supernatural to say from the heart, "The Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord" (Job 1:21).

As God is truly made our portion, we learn to admire His wisdom, and to know that He does all things well. Thus the heart is kept in "perfect peace" as the mind is stayed on Him (Isaiah 26:3).

Here, then, is another sure test: if your Bible study is teaching you that God's way is best, if it is causing you to submit unrepiningly to all His dispensations, if you are enabled to give thanks for all things (Ephesians 5:20)—then are you profiting indeed.

7. We profit from our study of the Scriptures, when we have greater fervent praise for God's goodness. Praise is the outflow of a heart which finds its satisfaction in God. The language of such a one is, "I will bless the Lord at all times. His praise shall continually be in my mouth" (Psalm 34:1). What abundant cause have God's people for praising Him! Loved with an everlasting love, made sons and heirs, all things working together for their good, their every need supplied, an eternity of bliss assured to them—their harps of gladness ought never to be silent. Nor will they be, while they enjoy fellowship with Him who is "altogether lovely." The more we are increasing in the knowledge of God (Colossians 1:10), the more shall we adore Him. But it is only as the Word dwells in us richly, that we are filled with spiritual songs (Colossians 3:16) and make melody in our hearts to the Lord.

The more our souls are drawn out in true worship, the more we are found thanking and praising our great God—the clearer evidence we give that our study of His word is profiting us.

The Scriptures and CHRIST

The order we follow in this series is that of experience. It is not until man is made thoroughly displeased with himself, that he begins to aspire after God. The fallen creature deluded by Satan, is self-satisfied until his sin-blinded eyes are opened to get a sight of himself. The Holy Spirit first works in us a sense of our spiritual ignorance, vanity, poverty and depravity, before He brings us to perceive and acknowledge that in God alone are to be found true wisdom, real blessedness, perfect goodness and unspotted righteousness. We must be made conscious of our imperfections, before we can really appreciate the Divine perfections. As the perfections of God are contemplated, man becomes still more aware of the infinite distance that separates him from the most High God. As he learns something of God's pressing claims upon him, and his own utter inability to meet them, he is prepared to hear and welcome the good news that Another has fully met those claims for all who are led to believe in Him.

"The Scriptures testify about Me," said the Lord Jesus (John 5:39). They testify of Him as the only Savior for perishing sinners, as the only Mediator between God and men, as the only one through whom the Father can be approached. They testify to the wondrous perfections of His person, the varied glories of His offices, and the sufficiency of His finished work. Apart from the Scriptures He cannot be known—in them alone He is revealed. When the Holy Spirit takes of the things of Christ and shows them unto His people, in thus making them known to the soul He uses nothing but what is written. While it is true that Christ is the key to the Scriptures, it is equally true that only in the Scriptures do we have an opening-up of the "mystery of Christ" (Ephesians 3:4).

The measure in which we profit from our reading and study of the Scriptures may be ascertained by the extent to which Christ is becoming more real and more precious unto our hearts. To "grow in grace" is defined as growth in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2 Peter 3:18). To "know" Christ (Philippians 3:10) was the supreme longing and aim of the apostle Paul, a longing and an aim to which he subordinated all other interests. But mark it well, the "knowledge" which is spoken of in these verses is not intellectual, but spiritual; not theoretical, but experimental; not general, but personal. It is a supernatural knowledge, which is imparted to the regenerate heart by the operations of the Holy Spirit, as He interprets and applies to us the Scriptures concerning Jesus.

Now the knowledge of Christ which the blessed Spirit imparts to the believer through the Scriptures profits him in different ways, according to his varying frames, circumstances and needs. Concerning the bread which God gave to the children of Israel during their wilderness wanderings, it is recorded that "some gathered more, some less" (Exodus 16:17). The same is true in our apprehension of Him of whom the manna was a type. There is that in the wondrous person of Christ, that which is exactly suited to our every condition, every circumstance, every need—both for time and eternity; but we are slow to realize it, and slower still to act upon it. There is an inexhaustible fullness in Christ (John 1:16) which is available for us to draw from, and the principle regulating the extent to which we become "strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus" (2 Timothy 2:1) is "According to your faith, will it be done unto you" (Matthew 9:29).

1. An individual is profited from the Scriptures, when they reveal to him his need of Christ. Man in his natural estate deems himself self-sufficient. True, he has a dim perception that all is not quite right between himself and God—yet has he no difficulty in persuading himself that he is able to do that which will appease Him. This lies at the foundation of all man's religion, begun by Cain, in whose "way" (Jude 11) the multitudes still walk. Tell the devout religionist that "those who are in the flesh cannot please God" (Romans 8:8), and he is at once offended. Press upon him the fact that "all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags" (Isaiah 64:4), and his hypocritical decorum at once gives place to anger. So it was when Christ was on earth. The most religious people of all, the Jews, had no sense that they were "lost" and in dire need of an almighty Savior.

"Those who are whole need not a physician, but those who are sick" (Matthew 9:12). It is the peculiar office of the Holy Spirit, by His application of the Scriptures, to convict sinners of their desperate condition, to bring them to see that their state is such that "from the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness" in them, but "only wounds, and bruises, and putrefying sores" (Isaiah 1:6). As the Spirit convicts us of our sins—our ingratitude to God, our murmuring against Him, our wanderings from Him; as He presses upon us the claims of God—His right to our love, obedience and adoration, and all our sad failures to render Him His due—then we are made to recognize that Christ is our only hope, and that, unless we flee to Him for refuge, the righteous wrath of God will most certainly fall upon us!

Nor is this to be limited to the initial experience of conversion. The more the Spirit deepens His work of grace in the regenerated soul, the more that individual is made conscious of his pollution, his sinfulness and his vileness; and the more does he discover his need of, and learn to value that precious, precious blood which cleanses from all sin. The Spirit is here to glorify Christ, and one chief way in which He does so is by opening wider and wider the eyes of those for whom He died, to see how suited Christ is for such wretched, foul, Hell-deserving creatures. Yes, the more we are truly profiting from our reading of the Scriptures, the more do we feel our need of Him.

2. An individual is profited from the Scriptures, when they make Christ more real to him. The great mass of the Israelitish nation saw nothing more than the outward shell in the rites and ceremonies which God gave them, but a regenerated remnant were privileged to behold Christ Himself. "Abraham rejoiced to see My day" said Christ (John 8:56). Moses esteemed "the reproach of Christ" greater riches than the treasures of Egypt (Hebrews 11:16). So it is in Christendom. To the multitudes Christ is but a name, or at most a historic character. They have no personal dealings with Him, nor enjoy spiritual communion with Him.

Should they hear one speak in rapture of His surpassing excellency, they regard him as an enthusiast or a fanatic. To them Christ is unreal, vague, intangible. But with the real Christian it is far otherwise. The language of his heart is:

I have heard the voice of Jesus,
Tell me not of anything beside;

I have seen the face of Jesus,
And my soul is satisfied!

Yet such a blissful sight is not the consistent and unvarying experience of the saints. Just as clouds come in between the sun and the earth, so failures in our walk interrupt our communion with Christ and serve to hide from us the light of His countenance. "He who has My commandments, and keeps them, he it is who loves Me; and he who loves Me shall be loved by My Father, and I will love him, and will manifest Myself to him" (John 14:21).

Yes, it is the one who by grace is treading the path of obedience, to whom the Lord Jesus grants manifestations of Himself. And the more frequent and prolonged these manifestations are, the more real He becomes to the soul, until we are able to say with Job, "I have heard of You by the hearing of the ear; but now my eye sees You!" (42:5). Thus the more Christ is becoming a living reality to me, the more I am profiting from the Word.

3. An individual is profited from the Scriptures, when he becomes more enthralled with Christ's perfections. It is a sense of need which first drives the soul to Christ, but it is the realization of His excellency which draws us to run after Him. The more real Christ becomes to us, the more are we attracted by His perfections. At the beginning He is viewed only as a Savior, but as the Spirit continues to take of the things of Christ and show them unto us we discover that upon His head are "many crowns!" (Revelation 19:12).

Of old it was said, "His name shall be called Wonderful" (Isaiah 9:6). His name signifies all that He is as made known in Scripture. "Wonderful" are His offices, in their number, variety, sufficiency. He is the Friend that sticks closer than a brother, to help in every time of need. He is the great High Priest, who is touched with the feeling of our infirmities. He is the Advocate with the Father, who pleads our cause when Satan accuses us.

Our great need is to be occupied with Christ, to sit at His feet as Mary did, and receive out of His fullness. Our chief delight should be . . .

to "consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession," to contemplate the various relations which He sustains to us, to meditate upon the many promises He has given to us, to dwell upon His wondrous and changeless love for us.

As we do this, we shall so delight ourselves in the Lord that the siren voices of this world will lose all their charm for us. Ah, my reader, do you know anything about this in your own actual experience? Is Christ the chief among ten thousand to your soul? Has He won your heart? Is it your chief joy to get alone and be occupied with Him? If not, your Bible reading and study has profited you little indeed.

4. An individual is profited from the Scriptures, as Christ becomes more precious to him. Christ is precious in the esteem of all true believers (1 Peter 2:7). They count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus their Lord (Philippians 3:8). His name to them is as ointment poured forth (Canticles 1:3). As the glory of God that appeared in the wondrous beauty of the temple, and in the wisdom and splendor of Solomon, drew worshipers to him from the uttermost parts of the earth—so the unparalleled excellency of Christ which was prefigured thereby, does more powerfully attract the hearts of His people.

The Devil knows this full well, therefore is he ceaselessly engaged in blinding the minds of those who believe not, by placing between them and Christ the allurements of this world. God permits him to assail the believer also, but it is written, "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you" (James 4:7). Resist him by definite and earnest prayer, entreating the Spirit to draw out your affections to Christ.

The more we are engaged with Christ's perfections, the more we love and adore Him. It is lack of experimental acquaintance with Him that makes our hearts so cold towards Him. But where real and daily fellowship is cultivated, the Christian will be able to say with the Psalmist, "Whom have I in Heaven but You? And earth has nothing I desire besides You. My flesh and my heart may fail, but God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever!" (Psalm 73:25-26). This it is which is the very essence and distinguishing nature of true Christianity. Legalistic zealots may be busily engaged in tithing mint and anise and cummin, they may encompass sea and land to make one proselyte, and yet have no love for God in Christ. It is the heart that God looks at: "My son, give Me your heart!" (Proverbs 23:26) is His demand. The more precious Christ is to us, the more delight does He have in us.

5. An individual who is profited from the Scriptures, has an increasing confidence in Christ. There is "little faith" (Matthew 14:3) and "great faith" (Matthew 8:10). There is the "full assurance of faith" (Hebrews 10:22), and trusting in the Lord "with all the heart" (Proverbs 3:5). Just as there is growing "from strength to strength" (Psalm 84:7), so we read of "from faith to faith" (Romans 1:17). The stronger and steadier our faith, the more the Lord Jesus is honored. Even a cursory reading of the four Gospels reveals the fact that nothing pleased the Savior more than the firm reliance which was placed in Him by the few who really counted upon Him. He Himself lived and walked by faith, and the more we do so the more are the members being conformed to their Head. Above everything else there is one thing to be aimed at and diligently sought by earnest prayer—that our faith may be increased. Of the Thessalonian saints Paul was able to say, "Your faith grows exceedingly" (2 Thes. 1:3).

Now Christ cannot be trusted at all unless He is known, and the better He is known the more will He be trusted: "And those who know Your name will put their trust in You" (Psalm 9:10). As Christ becomes more real to the heart, as we are increasingly occupied with His manifold perfections, and He becomes more precious to us, confidence in Him is deepened until it becomes as natural to trust Him as it is to breathe. The Christian life is a walk of faith (2 Corinthians 5:7), and that very expression denotes a continual progress, an increasing deliverance from doubts and fears, and a fuller assurance that all He has promised He will perform.

Abraham is the father of all those who believe, and thus the record of his life furnishes an illustration of what a deepening confidence in the Lord signifies. First, at His bare word he turned his back upon all that was dear to the flesh. Second, he went forth in simple dependence on Him and dwelt as a stranger and sojourner in the land of promise, though he never owned a single foot of it. Third, when the promise was made of a seed in his old age, he considered not the obstacles in the way of its fulfillment, but was strong in faith, giving glory to God. Finally, when called on to offer up Isaac, through whom the promises were to be realized, he accounted that God was able to "raise him up, even from the dead" (Hebrews 11:19).

In the history of Abraham we are shown how grace is able to subdue an evil heart of unbelief, how the spirit may be victorious over the flesh, how the supernatural fruits of a God-given and God-sustained faith may be brought forth by a man of like passions with us. This is recorded for our encouragement, for us to pray that it may please the Lord to work in us what He wrought in and through the father of the faithful. Nothing more pleases, honors and glorifies Christ than the confiding trust, the expectant confidence, and the childlike faith of those to whom He has given every cause to trust Him with all their hearts. And nothing more evidences that we are being profited from the Scriptures than an increasing faith in Christ.

6. An individual is profited from the Scriptures, when they beget in him a deepening desire to please Christ.

"You are not your own, for you are bought with a price" (1 Corinthians 6:19,20) is the first great fact that Christians need to apprehend. Henceforth they are not to "live unto themselves, but unto Him who died for them, and rose again" (2 Corinthians 5:15). Love delights to please its object, and the more our affections are drawn out to Christ, the more shall we desire to honor Him by a life of obedience to His known will, "If anyone loves Me, he will obey My teaching." (John 14:23). It is not in happy emotions or in verbal professions of devotion, but in the actual assumption of His yoke and the practical submitting to His precepts, that Christ is most pleased.

It is at this point particularly that the genuineness of our profession may be tested and proved. Have those a faith in Christ, who make no effort to learn His will? What a contempt of the king, if his subjects refuse to read his proclamations! Where there is genuine faith in Christ, there will be delight in His commandments, and a sorrowing when they are broken by us. When we displease Christ we should mourn over our failure. It is impossible seriously to believe that it was my sins which caused the Son of God to shed His precious blood, without my hating them. If Christ groaned under sin, we shall groan too. And the more sincere those groanings are, the more earnestly shall we seek grace for deliverance from all that displeases, and strength to do all that which pleases our blessed Redeemer.

"Finally, brothers, we instructed you how to live in order to please God, as in fact you are living. Now we ask you and urge you in the Lord Jesus to do this more and more." 1 Thessalonians 4:1. "And we pray this in order that you may live a life worthy of the Lord and may please Him in every way: bearing fruit in every good work, growing in the knowledge of God." Colossians 1:10

7. An individual is profited from the Scriptures, when they cause him to long for the return of Christ. Love can be satisfied with nothing short of a sight of its object. True, even now we behold Christ by faith, yet it is "through a glass, darkly." But at His coming we shall behold Him "face to face" (1 Corinthians 13:12). Then will be fulfilled His own words, "Father, I want those You have given me to be with Me where I am, and to see My glory!" (John 17:24). Only this will fully meet the longings of His heart—and only this will meet the longings of those redeemed by Him. Only then will He "see of the travail of His soul, and be satisfied" (Isaiah 53:11). "As for me, I will behold Your face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied, when I awake with Your likeness!" (Psalm 17:15)

At the return of Christ we shall be done with sin forever. The elect are predestined to be conformed to the image of God's Son, and that Divine purpose will be realized only when Christ receives His people unto Himself. "We shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is" (1 John 3:2). Never again will our communion with Him be broken; never again shall we groan and moan over our inward corruptions; never again shall we be harassed with unbelief. He will present His Church to Himself as a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing! (Ephesians 5:27)

For that hour we eagerly wait. For our Redeemer we lovingly look. The more we yearn for the coming One, the more we are trimming our lamps in earnest expectation of His coming, the more do we give evidence that we are profiting from our knowledge of the Word.

Let the reader and writer honestly search themselves as in the presence of God.

"Search me, O God, and know my heart; test me and know my anxious thoughts. Point out anything in me that offends You, and lead me along the path of everlasting life." Psalm 139:23-24

Let us seek truthful answers to these questions:

Have we a deeper sense of our need of Christ?

Is He Himself becoming to us a brighter and living reality?

Are we finding increasing delight in being occupied with His perfections?

Is Christ Himself becoming daily more precious to us?

Is our faith in Him growing so that we confidently trust Him for everything?

Are we really seeking to please Him in all the details of our lives

Are we so yearning for Him, that we would be filled with joy did we know for certain that He would come during the next twenty-four hours?

May the Holy Spirit search our hearts with these pointed questions!

The Scriptures and PRAYER

John Bunyan: "Prayer is a sincere, sensible, affectionate pouring out of the soul to God, through Christ, in the strength and assistance of the Spirit—for such things as God has promised."

A prayerless Christian is a contradiction in terms. Just as a still-born child is a dead one, so a professing believer who does not pray is devoid of spiritual life. Prayer is the breath of the new nature in the saint, as the Word of God is its food. When the Lord would assure the Damascus disciple that Saul of Tarsus had been truly converted, He told him, "Behold, he prays!" (Acts 9:11). On many occasions had that self-righteous Pharisee bowed his knees before God and gone through his "devotions," but this was the first time he had ever really prayed. This important distinction needs emphasizing in this day of powerless forms (2 Timothy 3:5). Those who content themselves with formal prayers to God, know Him not; for "the spirit of grace and supplication" (Zechariah 12:10) are never separated. God has no dumb children in His regenerated family: "Shall not God avenge His own elect, who cry day and night unto Him?" (Luke 18:7). Yes, "cry" unto Him, not merely "say" their prayers.

But will the reader be surprised when the writer declares it is his deepening conviction that, probably, the Lord's own people sin more in their efforts to pray, than in connection with any other thing they engage in?

What formality there is, where there should be reality! What presumptuous demandings, where there should be submissiveness! What hypocrisy, where there should be brokenness of heart! How little we really feel the sins we confess, and what little sense of deep need for the mercies we seek! And even where God grants a measure of deliverance from these awful sins, how much coldness of heart, how much unbelief, how much self-will and self-pleasing have we to bewail! Those who have no remorse about these things, are strangers to the spirit of holiness.

The Word of God should be our directory in prayer. Alas, how often we have made our own fleshly inclinations the rule of our asking. "All Scripture is God-breathed and is useful for teaching, rebuking, correcting and training in righteousness, so that the man of God may be thoroughly equipped for every good work." (2 Timothy 3:16-17). Since we are required to "pray in the Spirit" (Jude 20), it follows that our prayers ought to be according to the Scriptures, seeing that the Spirit is their Author throughout. It equally follows that according to the measure in which the Word of Christ dwells in us "richly" (Colossians 3:16) or sparsely—the more or the less will our petitions be in harmony with the mind of the Spirit, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks" (Matthew 12:34). In proportion as we hide the Word in our hearts, and it cleanses, molds and regulates our inner man—will our prayers be acceptable in God's sight.

Thus the purity and power of our prayer-life are another index by which we may determine the extent to which we are profiting from our reading and searching of the Scriptures. If our Bible study is not, under the blessing of the Spirit, convicting us of the sin of prayerlessness, revealing to us the place which prayer ought to have in our daily lives, and is actually bringing us to spend more time in the secret place of the Most High; unless it is teaching us how to pray more acceptably to God, how to appropriate

His promises and plead them before Him, how to appropriate His precepts and turn them into petitions—then not only has the time we spend over the Word been to no soul enrichment, but the very knowledge that we have acquired of its letter will only add to our condemnation in the day to come. "Be doers of the Word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves" (James 1:22) applies to its prayer-admonitions as to everything else in it. Let us now point out seven criteria:

1. We are profited from the Scriptures when we are brought to realize the deep importance of prayer. It is really to be feared that many present-day readers, and even students of the Bible, have no deep convictions that a definite prayer-life is absolutely essential to a daily walking and communing with God, as it is for deliverance from the power of indwelling sin, the seductions of the world, and the assaults of Satan. If such a conviction really gripped their hearts, would they not spend far more time on their faces before God? It is worse than idle to reply, "A multitude of duties which have to be performed crowd out prayer, though much against my wishes." But the fact remains that each of us makes time for anything we deem to be imperative. Who ever lived a busier life than our Savior? Yet who found more time for prayer? If we truly yearn to be suppliants and intercessors before God and use all the available time we now have, He will so order things for us that we shall have more time for prayer.

The lack of positive conviction of the deep importance of prayer is plainly evidenced in the corporate life of professing Christians. God has plainly said, "My house shall be called the house of prayer" (Matthew 21:13). Note, not "the house of preaching and singing," but of prayer. Yet, in the great majority of even so-called orthodox churches, the ministry of prayer has become a negligible quantity. There are still evangelistic campaigns, and Bible-teaching conferences—but how rarely one hears of two weeks set apart for special prayer! And how much good do these "Bible conferences" accomplish, if the prayer-life of the churches is not strengthened? But when the Spirit of God applies in power to our hearts such words as, "Watch and pray, lest you enter into temptation" (Mark 14:38), "In everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God" (Philippians 4:6), "Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving" (Colossians 4:2)—then are we being profited from the Scriptures.

2. We are profited from the Scriptures when we are made to feel that we know not how to pray. "We know not what we should pray for as we ought" (Romans 8:26). How very few professing Christians really believe this! The idea most generally entertained is that people know well enough what they should pray for—only they are careless and wicked, and so fail to pray for what they are fully assured is their duty. But such a conception is at direct variance with this inspired declaration in Romans 8:26. It is to be observed that that flesh-humbling affirmation is made not simply of men in general, but of the saints of God in particular, among which the apostle did not hesitate to include himself: "We know not what we should pray for as we ought." If this is the condition of the regenerate, how much more so of the unregenerate! Yet it is one thing to read and mentally assent to what this verse says, but it is quite another to have an experimental realization of it, for the heart to be made to feel that what God requires from us He must Himself work in and through us.

"I often say my prayers,
But do I ever pray?
And do the wishes of my heart
Go with the words I say?

I may as well kneel down
And worship gods of stone,
As offer to the living God
A prayer of words alone."

It is many years since the writer was taught these lines by his mother—now "present with the Lord"—but their searching message still comes home with force to him. The Christian can no more pray without the direct enabling of the Holy Spirit than he can create a world! This must be so, for real prayer is a felt need awakened within us by the Spirit, so that we ask God, in the name of Christ, for that which is in accord with His holy will. "If we ask anything according to His will, He hears us" (1 John 5:14). But to ask something which is not according to God's will is not praying, but presuming. True, God's revealed will is made known in His Word, yet not in such a way as a cook-book contains recipes and directions for preparing various dishes. The Scriptures frequently enumerate principles which call for continuous exercise of heart and Divine help to show us their application to different cases and circumstances. Thus we are being profited from the Scriptures when we are taught our deep need of crying "Lord, teach us to pray" (Luke 11:1), and are actually constrained to beg Him for the spirit of prayer.

3. We are profited from the Scriptures when we are made conscious of our need of the Spirit's help. First, that He may make known to us our real needs. Take, for example, our temporal needs. How often we are in some external strait; things from without press hard upon us, and we long to be delivered from these trials and difficulties. Surely here we "know" of ourselves what to pray for. No, indeed; far from it! The truth is that, despite our natural desire for relief, so ignorant are we, so dull is our discernment, that (even where there is an exercised conscience) we know not what submission unto His pleasure God may require, or how He may sanctify these afflictions to our inward good. Therefore, God calls the petitions of most who seek for relief from external trials, "howlings," and not a crying unto Him with the heart (see Hosea 7:14). "For who knows what is good for man in this life?" (Ecclesiastes 6:12). Ah, heavenly wisdom is needed to teach us our temporal "needs" so as to make them a matter of prayer according to the mind of God.

Perhaps a few words need to be added to what has just been said. TEMPORAL things may be scripturally prayed for (Matthew 6:11, etc.), but with this threefold limitation:

First, incidentally and not primarily—for they are not the things which Christians are principally concerned with (Matthew 6:33). It is heavenly and eternal realities (Colossians 3:1-2) which are to be sought first and foremost, as being of far greater importance and value than temporal things.

Second, subordinately, as a means to an end. In seeking material things from God it should not be in order that we may be gratified, but as an aid to our pleasing Him better.

Third, submissively, not dictatorially, for that would be the sin of presumption. Moreover, we know not whether any temporal mercy would really contribute to our highest good (Psalm 106:18), and therefore we must leave it with God to decide.

We have inward soul needs as well as outward temporal needs. Some of these may be discerned in the light of conscience—such as the guilt and defilement of sin, of sins against light and nature and the plain letter of the Word. Nevertheless, the knowledge which we have of ourselves by means of the conscience is so dark and confused that, apart from the Spirit, we are in no way able to discover the true fountain of cleansing. The things about which believers do and ought to treat primarily with God in their supplications, are the inward frames and spiritual dispositions of their souls.

Thus, David was not satisfied with confessing all known transgressions and his original sin (Psalm 51:1-5), nor yet with an acknowledgment that none could understand his errors, where he desired to be cleansed from "secret faults" (Psalm 19:12). He also begged God to undertake the inward searching of his heart to find out what was amiss in him (Psalm 139:23, 24), knowing that God principally requires "truth in the inward parts" (Psalm 51:6). Thus, in view of 1 Corinthians 2:10-12, we should definitely seek the Spirit's aid that we may pray acceptably to God.

4. We are profited from the Scriptures when the Spirit teaches us the right end in praying. God has appointed the ordinance of prayer with at least a threefold design:

First, that the great triune God might be honored, for prayer is an act of worship, a paying homage—to the Father as the Giver, in the Son's name, by whom alone we may approach Him, by the moving and directing power of the Holy Spirit.

Second, to humble our hearts—for prayer is ordained to bring us into the place of dependence, to develop within us a sense of our helplessness, by owning that without the Lord we can do nothing, and that we are beggars upon His charity for everything we are and have. But how feebly is this realized (if at all) by any of us until the Spirit takes us in hand, removes pride from us, and gives God His true place in our hearts and thoughts.

Third, as a means or way of obtaining for ourselves the Scriptural things for which we ask.

It is greatly to be feared that one of the principal reasons why so many of our prayers remain unanswered is because we have a wrong and unworthy end in view. Our Savior said, "Ask, and it shall be given to you" (Matthew 7:7). But James affirms of some, "You ask, and receive not, because you ask amiss, that you may consume it upon your lusts" (James 4:3). To pray for anything, and not expressly unto the end which God has designed, is to "ask amiss," and therefore to no purpose. Whatever confidence we may have in our own wisdom and integrity—if we are left to ourselves our aims will never be suited to the will of God. Unless the Spirit restrains the flesh within us, our own natural and distempered affections intermix themselves in our supplications, and thus are rendered vain. "Whatever you do, do all to the glory of God" (1 Corinthians 10:31). Yet none but the Spirit can enable us to subordinate all our desires unto God's glory.

5. We are profited from the Scriptures when we are taught how to plead God's promises. Prayer must be in faith (Romans 10:14), or God will not hear it. Now faith has respect to God's promises (Hebrews 4:1; Romans 4:21); if, therefore, we do not understand what God has pledged to give, we cannot pray at all. The promises of God contain the matter of prayer and define the measure of it. What God has promised, all that He has promised, and nothing else—we are to pray for. "Secret things belong unto the Lord our God" (Deuteronomy 29:29), but the declaration of His will and the revelation of His grace belong unto us, and are our rule.

There is nothing that we really stand in need of, but God has promised to supply it—yet in such a way and under such limitations as will make it good and useful to us. So too there is nothing God has promised but we stand in need of it, or are some way or other concerned in it as members of the mystical body of Christ. Hence, the better we are acquainted with the Divine promises, and the more we are enabled to understand the goodness, grace and mercy prepared and proposed in them—the better equipped are we for acceptable prayer.

Some of God's promises are general, rather than specific.

Some are conditional, others are unconditional.

Some are fulfilled in this life, others in the world to come.

Nor are we able of ourselves to discern which promise is most suited to our particular case and present emergency and need, or to appropriate by faith and rightly plead it before God. Therefore we are expressly told, "No one knows the thoughts of God, except the Spirit of God. We have not received the spirit of the world but the Spirit who is from God, that we may understand what God has freely given us." (1 Corinthians 2:11-12).

Should someone reply: If so much is required unto acceptable praying, if we cannot supplicate God aright without much less trouble than you indicate, few will continue long in this duty, then we answer that such an objector knows not what it is to pray, nor does he seem willing to learn.

6. We are profited from the Scriptures when we are brought to complete submission unto God. As stated above, one of the Divine designs in appointing prayer as an ordinance, is that we might be humbled. This is outwardly denoted when we bow the knee before the Lord. Prayer is an acknowledgment of our helplessness, and a looking to Him from whom all our help comes. It is an owning of His sufficiency to supply our every need. It is a making known our requests unto God (Philippians 4:6); but requests are very different from demands. We are to spread our case before God, but leave it to His superior wisdom to prescribe how it shall be dealt with. There must be no dictating, nor can we "claim" anything from God—for we are beggars dependent upon His mere mercy. In all our praying we must add, "Nevertheless, not as I will, but as You will."

But may not faith plead God's promises and expect an answer? Certainly, but it must be God's answer. Paul besought the Lord thrice to remove his thorn in the flesh; instead of doing so, the Lord gave him grace to endure it (2 Corinthians 12). Many of God's promises are general, rather than personal. He has promised His Church pastors, teachers and evangelists—and yet many a local company of His saints has languished long without them. Some of God's promises are indefinite and general rather than absolute and universal; as, for example, "Honor your father and mother . . . that it may go well with you and that you may enjoy long life on the earth." Eph. 6:2-3

God has not bound Himself to grant the particular thing we ask for, even though we ask in faith. Moreover, He reserves to Himself the right to determine the fit time and season for bestowing His mercies. Just because it "may be" God's will to grant a certain temporal mercy unto me, it is my duty to cast myself upon Him and plead for it—yet with entire submission to His good pleasure for the performance and timing of it.

7. We are profited from the Scriptures when prayer becomes a real and deep joy. Merely to "say our prayers" each morning and evening is an irksome task—a duty to be performed which brings a sigh of relief when it is done. But really to come into the conscious presence of God, to behold the glorious light of His countenance, to commune with Him at the mercy seat—is a foretaste of the eternal bliss awaiting us in Heaven. The one who is blessed with this experience says with the Psalmist, "It is good for me to draw near to God" (Psalm 73:28). Yes, it is good for the heart, for it is quieted. It is good for faith, for it is strengthened. It is good for the soul, for it is blessed. It is lack of this soul communion with God which is the root cause of our unanswered prayers: "Delight yourself in the Lord, and He shall give you the desires of your heart" (Psalm 37:4).

What is it which, under the blessing of the Spirit, produces and promotes this joy in prayer?

First, it is the heart's delight in God as the Object of prayer, and particularly the recognition and realization of God as our Father. Thus, when the disciples asked the Lord Jesus to teach them to pray, He said, "After this manner therefore pray: Our Father in Heaven." And again, "God has sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba [the Aramaic for "Father"], Father" (Galatians 4:6), which includes a filial, holy delight in God, such as children have in their parents in their most affectionate addresses to them. So again, in Ephesians 2:18, we are told, for the strengthening of faith and the comfort of our hearts, "For through Him [Christ] we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father." What peace, what assurance, what freedom this gives to the soul—to know we are approaching our omnipotent and loving Father!

Second, joy in prayer is furthered by the heart's apprehension and the soul's sight of God as on the throne of grace—a sight or prospect, not by carnal imagination, but by spiritual illumination, for it is by faith that we "see Him who is invisible!" (Hebrews 11:27). Faith being the "evidence of things not seen" (Hebrews 11:1), making its proper object evident and present unto those who believe. Such a sight of God upon such a "throne of grace" cannot but thrill the soul. Therefore are we exhorted, "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need" (Hebrews 4:16).

Thirdly, and drawn from the last quoted scripture, freedom and delight in prayer are stimulated by the consciousness that God is, through Jesus Christ, willing and ready to dispense grace and mercy to suppliant sinners. There is no reluctance in Him which we have to overcome. He is more ready to give, than we are to receive. So He is represented in Isaiah 30:18, "And therefore will the Lord wait, that He may be gracious unto you." Yes, He waits to be sought unto; waits for faith to lay hold of His readiness to bless. His ear is ever open to the cries of the righteous. Then "let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith" (Hebrews 10:22); "in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God," and we shall find that peace which passes all understanding, guarding our hearts and minds through Christ Jesus! (Philippians 4:6, 7).

John Flavel: "What sweeter outlet and vent to all your troubles can you find, than prayer? This would sweeten all your labors and sorrows in the world."

Charles Spurgeon:

If any of you should ask me for the epitome of the Christian life, I would say that it is in one word—prayer.

The habit of private prayer, and the constant practice of heart-communion with God, are the surest indicators of the work of the Holy spirit upon the soul.

The more a man loves God and becomes more like Jesus, the more delight he takes in heart communion with God.

We grow in Christlikeness, in private prayer.

Prayer is the true gauge of spiritual health.

Nothing brings such leanness into a Christian's soul, as lack of prayer.

A Christian's vigor, happiness, growth and usefulness—all depend upon prayer.

Prayer is the indispensable mark of the true child of God.

Nine times out of ten, spiritual declension from God begins in the neglect of private prayer.

The Scriptures and GOOD WORKS

"For it is by grace you have been saved, through faith—and this not from yourselves, it is the gift of God—not by works, so that no one can boast. For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God has before ordained that we should walk in them." Ephesians 2:8-10

The truth of God may well be likened to a narrow path skirted on either side by a dangerous and destructive precipice—in other words, it lies between two gulfs of error. The aptness of this figure may be seen in our proneness to sway from one extreme to another. Only the Holy Spirit's enabling can cause us to preserve the balance. Failure to do so inevitably leads to a fall into error—for error is not so much the denial of truth, as the perversion of truth, the pitting of one part of it against another.

The history of theology forcibly and solemnly illustrates this fact. One generation of men have rightly and earnestly contended for that aspect of truth which was most needed in their day. The next generation, instead of walking therein and moving forward, warred for it intellectually as the distinguishing mark of their party, and usually, in their defense of what was assaulted, have refused to listen to the balancing truth which often their opponents were insisting upon. The result being that they lost their sense of perspective, and emphasized what they believed outside of its scriptural proportions. Consequently, in the next generation, the true servant of God is called on almost to ignore what was so valuable in their eyes—and to emphasize that which they had, if not altogether denied, almost completely lost sight of.

It is certain that men, left to themselves, have ever found it impossible to keep the even line of truth between what appear to be conflicting doctrines, such as . . .

the sovereignty of God—and the responsibility of man;

election by grace—and the universal proclamation of the Gospel;

the justifying faith of Paul—and the justifying works of James.

Only too often, where the absolute sovereignty of God has been insisted upon—it has been to the ignoring of man's accountability. And where unconditional election has been held fast—the unfettered preaching of the Gospel to the unsaved has been let slip. On the other hand, where human accountability has been upheld—the sovereignty of God and the truth of election have generally been whittled down or completely ignored.

Many of our readers have witnessed examples which illustrate the truth of what has been said above—but few seem to realize that exactly the same difficulty is experienced when an attempt is made to show the precise relation between faith and good works.

If, on the one hand, some have erred in attributing to good works a place which Scripture does not warrant—it is certain that, on the other hand, some have failed to give to good works the province which Scripture assigns them.

If, on the one side, it is serious error to ascribe our justification before God to any performances of ours—on the other side, they are equally guilty who deny that good works are necessary in order to our reaching Heaven, and allow nothing more than that they are merely evidences or fruits of our justification. We are well aware that we are now (shall we say) treading on thin ice, and running a serious risk of ourselves being charged with heresy; nevertheless we deem it expedient to seek Divine aid in grappling with this difficulty, and then commit the outcomes thereof to God Himself.

In some quarters the claims of faith, though not wholly denied, have been disparaged because of a zeal to magnify good works. In other circles, reputed as orthodox (and they are what we now have chiefly in mind), only too rarely are good works assigned their proper place, and far too infrequently are professing Christians urged with apostolic earnestness to maintain them. No doubt this is due at times to a fear of undervaluing faith, and encouraging sinners in the fatal error of trusting to their own doings, rather than in the righteousness of Christ.

But no such apprehensions should hinder a preacher from declaring "all the counsel of God." If his theme is faith in Christ, as the Savior of the lost, let him fully set forth that truth without any modification, giving to this grace the place which the apostle gave it in his reply to the Philippian jailer (Acts 16:31).

But if his subject is good works, let him be no less faithful in keeping back nothing which Scripture says thereon. Let him not forget that Divine command, "Affirm constantly, that those who have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works" (Titus 3:8).

The last-quoted scripture is the most pertinent one for these days of looseness and laxity, of worthless profession, and empty boasting. This expression "good works" is found in the New Testament in the singular or plural number no less than thirty times—and yet, from the rarity with which many preachers, who are esteemed sound in the faith, use, emphasize, and enlarge upon them—many of their hearers would conclude that those words occur but once or twice in all the Bible.

Speaking to the Jews on another subject, the Lord said, "What . . . God has joined together, let not man put asunder" (Mark 10:9). Now in Ephesians 2:8-10, God has joined two most vital and blessed things together which ought never to be separated in our hearts and minds—and yet they are most frequently parted in the modern pulpit. How many sermons are preached from the first two of these verses, which so clearly declare salvation to be by grace through faith and not of works. Yet how seldom are we reminded that the sentence which begins with grace and faith is only completed in verse 10, where we are told, "For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God has before ordained that we should walk in them."

We began this series by pointing out that the Word of God may be taken up from various motives and read with different designs, but that 2 Timothy 3:16-17, makes known for what these Scriptures are really "profitable," namely for doctrine or teaching, for reproof, correction, instruction in righteousness—and all of these that "the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Having dwelt upon . . .

1. its teaching about God and Christ,
2. its reproofs and corrections for sin,
3. its instruction in connection with prayer;

let us now consider how these furnish us unto "all good works." Here is another vital criterion by which an honest soul, with the help of the Holy Spirit, may ascertain whether or not his reading and study of the Word is really benefitting him.

1. We profit from the Word when we are thereby taught the TRUE PLACE of good works.

"Many people, in their eagerness to support orthodoxy as a system, speak of salvation by grace and faith in such a manner as to undervalue holiness and a life devoted to God. But there is no ground for this in the Holy Scriptures. The same Gospel that declares salvation to be freely by the grace of God through faith in the blood of Christ, and asserts, in the strongest terms, that sinners are justified by the righteousness of the Savior imputed to them on their believing in Him, without any respect to works of law—also assures us, that without holiness no man shall see God; that believers are cleansed by the blood of atonement; that their hearts are purified by faith, which works by love, and overcomes the world; and that the grace that brings salvation to all men, teaches those who receive it, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, they should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. Any fear that the doctrine of grace will suffer from the most strenuous inculcation of good works on a scriptural foundation, betrays an inadequate and greatly defective acquaintance with Divine truth. Any tampering with the Scriptures in order to silence their testimony in favor of the fruits of righteousness as absolutely necessary in the Christian—is a perversion and forgery with respect to the Word of God" (Alexander Carson).

But what force (ask some) has this ordination or command of God unto good works, when, notwithstanding it, though we fail to apply ourselves diligently unto obedience—we shall nevertheless be justified by the imputation of Christ's righteousness, and so may be saved without them? Such a senseless objection proceeds from utter ignorance of the believer's present state and relation to God. To suppose that the hearts of the regenerate are not as much and as effectually influenced with the authority and commands of God unto obedience, as if they were given in order unto their justification—is to ignore what true faith is, and what are the arguments and motives whereby the minds of Christians are principally affected and constrained. Moreover, it is to lose sight of the inseparable connection which God has made between our justification and our sanctification—to suppose that one of these may exist without the other is to overthrow the whole Gospel. The apostle deals with this very objection in Romans 6:1-3.

2. We profit from the Word when we are thereby taught the absolute NECESSITY of good works. If it be written that "without shedding of blood is no remission of sin" (Hebrews 9:22) and "without faith it is impossible to please him" (Hebrews 11:6)—the Scripture of Truth also declares, "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord" (Hebrews 12:14).

The life lived by the saints in Heaven is but the completion and consummation of that life which, after regeneration, they live here on earth. The difference between the two is not one of kind, but of degree. "The path of the just is as the shining light, that shines more and more unto the perfect day" (Proverbs 4:18). If there has been no walking with God on earth—then there will be no dwelling with God in Heaven. If there has been no real communion with Him in time—then there will be none with Him in eternity. Death effects no vital change to the heart. True, at death the remainders of sin are forever left behind by the saint, but no new nature is then imparted. If then he did not hate sin and love holiness before death—then he certainly will not do so afterwards.

No one really desires to go to Hell, though there are few indeed who are willing to forsake that broad road which inevitably leads there! All would like to go to Heaven, but only true Christians are really willing and determined to walk that narrow way which alone leads thereto. It is at this point that we may discern the precise place which good works have in connection with salvation. They do not merit salvation—yet they are inseparable from salvation. They do not procure a title to Heaven—yet they are among the means which God has appointed for His people's getting there. In no sense are good works the procuring cause of eternal life—but they are part of the means (as are the Spirit's work within us—and repentance, faith and obedience by us) conducing to it.

God has appointed the way wherein we must walk in order to our arriving at the inheritance purchased for us by Christ! A life of daily obedience to God is that which alone gives actual admission to the enjoyment of what Christ has purchased for His people—admission now by faith, and admission at death or His return, in full actuality.

3. We profit from the Word when we are taught thereby the DESIGN of good works. This is clearly made known in Matthew 5:16: "Let your light so shine before men—that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father in Heaven." It is worthy of our notice, that this is the first occurrence of the expression, and, as is generally the case, the initial mention of a thing in Scripture intimates its subsequent scope and usage. Here we learn that the disciples of Christ are to authenticate their Christian profession by the silent but vocal testimony of their lives (for "light" makes no noise in its "shining"), that men may see (not hear boastings about) their good works, and this that their Father in Heaven may be glorified. Here, then, is their fundamental design—for the honor of God.

As the contents of Matthew 5:16 are so generally misunderstood and perverted, we add a further thought thereon. Only too commonly the "good works" are confounded with the "light" itself—yet they are quite distinct, though inseparably connected. The "light" is our testimony for Christ—but of what value is this unless the life itself exemplifies it? The "good works" are not for the directing of attention to ourselves—but to Him who has wrought them in us. They are to be of such a character and quality that even the ungodly will know they proceed from some higher source than fallen human nature. Supernatural fruit requires a supernatural root—and as this is recognized, the Gardener is glorified thereby.

Equally significant is the last reference to "good works" in Scripture: "Live such good lives among the pagans that, though they accuse you of doing wrong, they may see your good works and glorify God on the day he visits us." (1 Peter 2:12). Thus the first and final allusions to good works emphasize their design—to glorify God because of His works through His people in this world.

4. We profit from the Word when we are taught thereby the true NATURE of good works. This is something concerning which the unregenerate are in entire ignorance. Judging merely from the external, estimating things only by human standards—they are quite incompetent to determine what works are good in God's esteem, and what are not. Supposing that what men regard as good works, that God will approve of also—they remain in the darkness of their sin-blinded understandings. Nor can any convince them of their error, until the Holy Spirit quickens them into newness of life, bringing them out of darkness into God's marvelous light. Then it will appear that only those are good works, which are done:

1. in obedience to the revealed will of God (Romans 6:16),
2. from a principle of love to Him (Hebrews 10:24),
3. in the name of Christ (Colossians 3:17), and
4. to the glory of God by Him (1 Corinthians 10:31).

The true nature of "good works" Was perfectly exemplified by the Lord Jesus.

All that He did was done in obedience to His Father. He "pleased not himself" (Romans 15:3), but ever performed the bidding of the One who had sent Him (John 6:38). He could say, "I always do those things that please Him" (John 8:29). There were no limits to Christ's subjection to the Father's will—He "became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross" (Philippians 2:8).

In the same way, all that He did proceeded from love to the Father and love to His neighbor. Love is the fulfilling of the Law; without love, compliance with the Law is nothing but servile subjection, and that cannot be acceptable to Him who is Love. Proof that all Christ's obedience flowed from love, is found in His words, "I delight to do Your will, O my God" (Psalm 40:8).

So also all that Christ did had in view the glory of the Father: "Father, glorify your name" (John 12:28) revealed the object constantly before Him.

5. We profit from the Word when we are taught thereby the true SOURCE of good works. Unregenerate men are capable of performing works which are good in a natural and civil sense—though not in the spiritual sense. They may do those things which, externally, as to matter and substance of them, are good, such as reading the Bible, attending the ministry of the Word, giving alms to the poor—yet the mainspring of such actions, their lack of godly motive, renders them as filthy rags in the sight of the thrice holy One.

The unregenerate have no power to perform works in a spiritual manner, and therefore it is written, "There is none who do good—no, not one!" (Romans 3:12). Nor are they able to, "The sinful mind is hostile to God. It does not submit to God's law, nor can it do so." (Romans 8:7). Hence, even the plowing of the wicked is sin (Proverbs 21:4).

Nor are believers able to think a good thought or perform a good work of themselves (2 Corinthians 3:5). It is God who works in them "both to will and to do of his good pleasure" (Philippians 2:13).

When the Ethiopian can change his skin, and the leopard change his spots—then may they do good, who are accustomed to do evil (Jeremiah 13:23). Men may as soon expect to gather grapes from a thorn-bush, or figs of thistles—as good fruit to grow upon, or good works to be performed by the unregenerate. We have first:

to be "created in Christ Jesus" (Ephesians 2:10), have His Spirit put within us (Galatians 4:6), and His grace implanted in our hearts (Ephesians 4:7; 1 Corinthians 15:10), —before there is any capacity for good works.

Even then we can do nothing apart from Christ (John 15:5). Often we have a will to do that which is good, yet how to perform it we know not (Romans 7:18). This drives us to our knees, begging God to make us "perfect in every good work," working in us "that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ" (Hebrews 13:21). Thus we are emptied of self-sufficiency, and brought to realize that all our springs are in God (Psalm 87:7). And thus we discover that we can do all things through Christ who strengthens us (Philippians 4:13).

6. We profit from the Word when we are taught thereby the great IMPORTANCE of good works. Condensing as far as possible: "good works" are of great importance because by them . . .

God is glorified (Matthew 5:16), the mouths of those who speak against us are closed (1 Peter 2:12), we evidence the genuineness of our profession of faith (James 2:13-17).

It is highly expedient that we "adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things" (Titus 2:10). Nothing brings more honor to Christ than that those who bear His name are found living constantly (by His enablement) in a Christ-like way and spirit. It was not without reason, that the same Spirit who caused the apostle to preface his statement concerning Christ's coming into this world to save sinners with, "This is a faithful saying," etc., also moved him to write, "This is a faithful saying . . . that those who have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works" (Titus 3:8). May we indeed be "zealous for good works" (Titus 2:14).

7. We profit from the Word when we are taught thereby the true SCOPE of good works. This is so comprehensive as to include the discharge of our duties in every relationship in which God has placed us. It is interesting and instructive to note the first "good work" (as so described) in Holy Writ, namely, the anointing of the Savior by Mary of Bethany (Matthew 26:10; Mark 14:6). Indifferent alike to the blame or praise of men, with eyes only for the "chief among ten thousand"—she lavished upon Him her precious ointment.

Another woman, Dorcas (Acts 9:36), is also mentioned as "full of good works". After worship comes service, glorifying God among men, and benefitting others.

"That you might walk worthy of the Lord and may please him in every way, being fruitful in every good work" (Colossians 1:10).

The bringing up of children in the training and instruction of the Lord,

the lodging of strangers, the washing of the saints' feet (ministering to their temporal comforts) and relieving the afflicted (1 Timothy 5:10) are all spoken of in Scripture as "good works."

Unless our reading and study of the Scriptures is making us:
better soldiers of Jesus Christ,
better citizens of the country in which we sojourn,
better members of our earthly homes (kinder, gentler, more unselfish),
"thoroughly furnished unto all good works"
—it is profiting us little or nothing!

The Scriptures and OBEDIENCE

All professing Christians are agreed, in theory at least, that it is the bounden duty of those who bear His name to honor and glorify Christ in this world. But as to how this is to be done, as to what He requires from us to this end—there is wide difference of opinion. Many suppose that honoring Christ simply means to join some "church," take part in it and support its various activities. Others think that honoring Christ means to speak of Him to others and be diligently engaged in "personal work." Others seem to imagine that honoring Christ signifies little more than making liberal financial contributions to His cause. Few indeed realize that Christ is honored only as we live holily unto Him, and that, by walking in subjection to His revealed will. Few indeed really believe that word, "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams" (1 Samuel 15:22).

We are not Christians at all unless we have fully surrendered to and "received Christ Jesus the Lord" (Colossians 2:6). We would plead with you to ponder that statement diligently. Satan is deceiving many today by leading them to suppose that they are savingly trusting in "the finished work" of Christ, while their hearts remain unchanged and self still rules their lives. Listen to God's Word: "Salvation is far from the wicked; for they seek not Your statutes" (Psalm 119:155). Do you really seek His statutes"? Do you diligently search His Word to discover what He has commanded? "He who says, I know Him, and does not keep His commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him" (1 John 2:4). What could be plainer than that?

"And why do you call me, Lord, Lord—and do not do the things which I say?" (Luke 6:46). Obedience to the Lord in life, not merely glowing words from the lips, is what Christ requires. What a searching and solemn word is that in James 1:22: "Be doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves"! There are many "hearers" of the Word, regular hearers, reverent hearers, interested hearers; but alas, what they hear is not incorporated into the life—it does not regulate their way. And God says that those who are not doers of the Word are deceiving their own selves!

Alas, how many such there are in Christendom today! They are not downright hypocrites, but deluded. They suppose that because they are so clear upon salvation by grace alone that they are saved. They suppose that because they sit under the ministry of a man who has "made the Bible a new book" to them they have grown in grace. They suppose that because their store of biblical knowledge has increased, they are more spiritual. They suppose that the mere listening to a servant of God or reading his writings, is feeding on the Word.

Not so! We "feed" on the Word only when we personally appropriate, masticate and assimilate into our lives what we hear or read. Where there is not an increasing conformity of heart and life to God's Word, then increased knowledge will only bring increased condemnation. "And that servant who knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes" (Luke 12:47).

"Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth" (2 Tim 3:7). This is one of the prominent characteristics of the "perilous times" in which we are now living. People hear one preacher after another, attend this conference and that conference, read book after book on biblical subjects—and yet never attain unto a vital and practical acquaintance with the truth, so as to have an impression of its power and efficacy on the soul. There is such a thing as spiritual drowsy, and multitudes are suffering from it. The more they hear, the more they want to hear; they drink in sermons and addresses with avidity, but their lives are unchanged. They are puffed up with their knowledge, not humbled into the dust before God. The faith of God's elect is "the acknowledging [in the life] of the truth which is after godliness" (Titus 1:1), but to this the vast majority are total strangers.

God has given us His Word not only with the design of instructing us, but for the purpose of directing us—to make known what He requires us to do. The first thing we need is a clear and distinct knowledge of our duty; and the first thing God demands of us is a conscientious practice of it, corresponding to our knowledge. "What does the Lord require of you, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with your God?" (Micah 6:8). "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man" (Ecclesiastes 12:13). The Lord Jesus affirmed the same thing when He said, "You are my friends, if you obey whatever I command you" (John 15:14).

1. A man profits from the Word, as he discovers God's demands upon him—His undeviating demands, for He changes not. It is a great and grievous mistake to suppose that in this present dispensation God has lowered His demands, for that would necessarily imply that His previous demand was a harsh and unrighteous one. Not so! "The law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good" (Romans 7:12). The sum of God's demands is, "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your might" (Deuteronomy 6:5); and the Lord Jesus repeated it in Matthew 22:37. The apostle Paul enforced the same when he wrote, "If any man does not love the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema" (1 Corinthians 16:22).

2. A man profits from the Word, when he discovers how entirely and how sinfully he has failed to meet God's demands. And let us point out for the benefit of any who may take issue with the last paragraph that no man can see what a sinner he is, how infinitely short he has fallen of measuring up to God's standard—until he has a clear sight of the exalted demands of God upon him! Just in proportion as preachers lower God's standard of what He requires from every human being—to that extent will their hearers obtain an inadequate and faulty conception of their sinfulness, and the less will they perceive their need of an almighty Savior. But once a soul really perceives what are God's demands upon him, and how completely and constantly he has failed to render Him His due—then does he recognize what a desperate situation he is in. The law must be preached before any are ready for the Gospel.

3. A man profits from the Word, when he is taught therefrom that God, in His infinite grace, has fully provided for His people's meeting His own demands. At this point, too, much present-day preaching is seriously defective. There is being given forth what may loosely be termed a "half Gospel," but which in reality is virtually a denial of the true Gospel. Christ is brought in, yet only as a sort of make-weight. That Christ has vicariously met every demand of God upon all who believe upon Him, is blessedly true, yet it is only a part of the truth. The Lord Jesus has not only vicariously satisfied for His people the requirements of God's righteousness, but He has also secured that they shall personally satisfy them too. Christ has procured the Holy Spirit to make good in them, what the Redeemer wrought for them.

The grand and glorious miracle of salvation, is that the saved are regenerated. A transforming work is wrought within them. Their understandings are illuminated, their hearts are changed, their wills are renewed. They are made "new creatures in Christ Jesus" (2 Corinthians 5:17). God refers to this miracle of grace thus: "I will put My laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts" (Hebrews 8:10). The heart is now inclined to God's law—a disposition has been communicated to it which answers to its demands; there is a sincere desire to perform it. And thus the quickened soul is able to say, "When You said: Seek my face; my heart said unto You: Your face, Lord, will I seek" (Psalm 27:8).

Christ not only rendered a perfect obedience unto the Law for the justification of His believing people, but He also merited for them those supplies of His Spirit which were essential unto their sanctification, and which alone could transform carnal creatures and enable them to render acceptable obedience unto God. Though Christ died for the "ungodly" (Romans 5:6); though He finds them ungodly (Romans 4:5) when He justifies them—yet He does not leave them in that abominable state. On the contrary, He effectually teaches them by His Spirit to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts (Titus 2:12). Just as weight cannot be separated from a stone, or heat from a fire—so justification cannot be separated from sanctification.

When God really pardons a sinner in the court of his conscience, under the sense of that amazing grace—the heart is purified, the life is rectified, and the whole man is sanctified. Christ "gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people [not "careless about" but], zealous for good works" (Titus 2:14). Just as a substance and its properties, causes and their necessary effects, are inseparably connected—so are a saving faith and conscientious obedience unto God inextricably connected. Hence we read of "the obedience of faith" (Romans 16:26).

Said the Lord Jesus, "He who has my commandments, and keeps them—he it is that loves me" (John 14:21). Not in the Old Testament, the Gospels or the Epistles does God own anyone as a lover of Him, but the one who keeps His commandments. Love is something more than sentiment or emotion; it is a principle of action, and it expresses itself in something more than honeyed expressions—namely, by deeds which please the Object loved. "For this is the love of God, that we keep His commandments" (1 John 5:3). Oh, my reader, you are deceiving yourself if you do you think love God and yet have no deep desire and make no real effort to walk obediently before Him.

But what is obedience to God? It is far more than a mechanical performance of certain duties. I may have been brought up by Christian parents, and under them acquired certain moral habits—and yet my abstaining from taking the Lord's name in vain, and being guiltless of stealing, may be no obedience to the third and eighth commandments.

Again, obedience to God is far more than conforming to the conduct of His people. I may board in a home where the Sabbath is strictly observed, and out of respect for them, or because I think it is a good and wise course to rest one day in seven, I may refrain from all unnecessary labor on that day—and yet not keep the fourth commandment at all! Obedience is not only subjection to an external law, but it is the surrendering of my will to the authority of another. Thus, obedience to God is the heart's recognition of His lordship—of His right to command, and my duty to comply. It is the complete subjection of the soul to the blessed yoke of Christ.

That obedience which God requires can proceed only from a heart which loves Him. "Whatever you do—do it heartily, as to the Lord" (Colossians 3:23). That obedience which springs from a dread of punishment, is servile. That obedience which is performed in order to procure favors from God, is selfish and carnal. But spiritual and acceptable obedience is cheerfully given—it is the heart's free response to and gratitude for the unmerited regard and love of God for us.

4. We profit from the Word, when we not only see it is our bounden duty to obey God—but when there is wrought in us a love for His commandments. The "blessed" man is the one whose "delight is in the law of the Lord" (Psalm 1:2). And again we read, "Blessed is the man who fears the Lord, who delights greatly in his commandments" (Psalm 112:1). It affords a real test for our hearts to face honestly the questions: Do I really value His "commandments" as much as I do His promises? Ought I not to do so? Assuredly, for the one proceeds as truly from His love as does the other. The heart's compliance with the voice of Christ, is the foundation for all practical holiness.

Here again we would earnestly and lovingly beg the reader to attend closely to this detail. Any man who supposes that he is saved, and yet has no genuine love for God's commandment—is deceiving himself. Said the Psalmist, "O how I love Your law!" (Psalm 119:97). And again, "Therefore I love Your commandments above gold; yes, above fine gold" (Psalm 119:127). Should someone object that that was under the Old Testament, we ask: Do you intimate that the Holy Spirit produces a lesser change in the hearts of those whom He now regenerates, than He did of old? But a New Testament saint also placed on record, "I delight in the law of God after the inward man" (Romans 7:22). And, my reader, unless your heart delights in the "law of God" there is something radically wrong with you; yes, it is greatly to be feared that you are spiritually dead.

5. A man profits from the Word, when his heart and will are yielded to ALL God's commandments. Partial obedience is no obedience at all. A holy mind declines whatever God forbids, and chooses to practice all He requires—without any exception. If our minds submit not unto God in all His commandments, we submit not to His authority in anything He enjoins. If we do not approve of our duty in its full extent, we are greatly mistaken if we imagine that we have any liking unto any part of it. A person who has no principle of holiness in him, may yet be disinclined to many vices and be pleased to practice many virtues—as he perceives the former are unfit actions and the latter are, in themselves, lovely actions; but his disapprobation of vice and approbation of virtue, do not arise from any disposition to submit to the will of God.

True spiritual obedience is impartial. A renewed heart does not pick and choose from God's commandments; the man who does so is not performing God's will, but his own. Make no mistake upon this point; if we do not sincerely desire to please God in all things, then we do not truly wish to do so in anything. Self must be denied; not merely some of the things which may be craved, but self itself! A willful allowance of any known sin breaks the whole law (James 2:10, 11). "Then shall I not be ashamed, when I have respect unto all your commandments" (Psalm 119:6). Said the Lord Jesus, "You are my friends, if you do whatever I command you" (John 15:14). If I am not His friend, then I must be His enemy—for there is no other alternative—see Luke 19:27.

6. We profit from the Word, when the soul is moved to pray earnestly for enabling grace. In regeneration, the Holy Spirit communicates a nature which is fitted for obedience according to the Word. The heart has been won by God. There is now a deep and sincere desire to please Him. But the new nature possesses no inherent power, and the old nature or "flesh" strives against it, and the Devil opposes. Thus, the Christian exclaims, "To will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good, I find not" (Romans 7:18). This does not mean that he is the slave of sin, as he was before conversion; but it means that he finds not how to fully realize his spiritual aspirations. Therefore does he pray, "Make me to go in the path of Your commandments; for therein do I delight" (Psalm 119:35). And again, "Order my steps in Your Word, and let not any iniquity have dominion over me" (Psalm 119:133).

Here we would reply to a question which the above statements have probably raised in many minds: Are you affirming that God requires perfect obedience from us in this life? We answer, Yes! God will not set any lower standard before us than that (see 1 Peter 1:15).

Then does the real Christian measure up to that standard? Yes and no! Yes, in his heart, and it is at the heart that God looks (1 Samuel 16:7). In his heart every regenerated person has a real love for God's commandments, and genuinely desires to keep all of them completely. It is in this sense, and this alone, that the Christian is experimentally "perfect." The word "perfect," both in the Old Testament (Job 1:1, and Psalm 37:37) and in the New Testament (Philippians 3:15), means "upright", "sincere"—in contrast with "hypocritical".

"Lord, you have heard the desire of the humble" (Psalm 10:17). The "desires" of the saint are the language of his soul, and the promise is, "He will fulfill the desire of those who fear him" (Psalm 145:19). The Christian's desire is to obey God in all things, to be completely conformed to the image of Christ. But this will only be realized in the heavenly state. Meanwhile, God for Christ's sake, graciously accepts the will for the deed (1 Peter 2:5). He knows our hearts and see in His child a genuine love for and a sincere desire to keep all His commandments. He accepts the fervent longing and cordial endeavor, in lieu of an exact performance (2 Corinthians 8:12). But let none who are living in willful disobedience draw false peace and pervert to their own destruction, what has just been said for the comfort of those who are heartily desirous of seeking to please God in all the details of their lives.

If any asks: How am I to know that my "desires" are really those of a regenerate soul?

We answer: Saving grace is the communication to the heart of a habitual disposition unto holy acts.

The "desires" of the reader are to be tested thus:

Are they constant and continuous, or only by fits and starts?

Are they earnest and serious, so that you really hunger and thirst after righteousness" (Matthew 5:6) and pant "after God" (Psalm 42:1)?

Are they operative and effectual? Many desire to escape from Hell, yet their desires are not sufficiently strong to bring them to hate and turn from that which must inevitably bring them to Hell—namely, willful sinning against God. Many desire to go to Heaven, but not so much that they actually enter upon and follow that "narrow way" which alone leads there. True spiritual desires use the means of grace and spare no pains to realize them, and continue prayerfully pressing forward unto the mark set before them.

7. We profit from the Word, when we are even now, enjoying the reward of obedience. "Godliness is profitable unto all things" (1 Timothy 4:8).

By obedience we purify our souls (1 Peter 1:21).

By obedience we obtain the ear of God (1 John 3:22), just as disobedience is a barrier to our prayers (Psalm 66:18; Isaiah 59:2; Jeremiah 5:25).

By obedience we obtain precious and intimate manifestations of Christ unto the soul (John 14:21). As we tread the path of wisdom (complete subjection to God) we discover that "her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace" (Proverbs 3:17). "His commandments are not grievous" (1 John 5:3), and "in keeping of them there is great reward" (Psalm 19:11)

The Scriptures and the WORLD

Not a little is written to the Christian in the New Testament about "the world" and his attitude towards it. Its real nature is plainly defined, and the believer is solemnly warned against it. God's holy Word is a light from Heaven, shining here "in a dark place" (2 Peter 1:19). Its Divine rays exhibit things in their true colors, penetrating and exposing the false veneer and glamour by which many objects are cloaked. That world upon which so much labor is bestowed and money spent, and which is so highly extolled and admired by its blinded dupes, is declared to be "the enemy of God"; therefore are His children forbidden to be "conformed" to it and to have their affections set upon it.

The present phase of our subject is by no means the least important of those that we have set out to consider, and the serious reader will do well to seek Divine grace to measure himself or herself by it. One of the exhortations which God has addressed to His children runs, "As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that you may grow thereby" (1 Peter 2:2), and it behooves each one of them honestly and diligently to examine himself so as to discover whether or not this is the case with him. Nor are we to be content with an increase of mere head-knowledge of Scripture. What we need to be most concerned about is our practical growth, our experimental conformity to the image of Christ. And one point at which we may test ourselves is: Does my reading and study of God's Word make me less worldly?

1. We profit from the Word, when our eyes are opened to discern the true character of the world. One of the poets wrote, "God is in His Heaven—all is right with the world". From one standpoint that is blessedly true, but from another it is radically wrong, for "the whole world lies in wickedness" (1 John 5:19). But it is only as the heart is supernaturally enlightened by the Holy Spirit, that we are enabled to perceive that that which is highly esteemed among men is really an "abomination in the sight of God" (Luke 16:15). It is much to be thankful for when the soul is able to see that the "world" is a gigantic fraud, a hollow bauble, a vile thing, which must one day be burned up!

Before we go further, let us define that "world" which the Christian is forbidden to love. There are few words found upon the pages of Holy Writ used with a greater variety of meanings than this one. Yet careful attention to the context will usually determine its scope.

The "world" is a system or order of things, complete in itself. No foreign element is allowed to intrude, or if it does it is speedily accommodated or assimilated to itself. The "world" is fallen human nature acting itself out in the human family, fashioning the framework of human society in accord with its own tendencies. It is the organized kingdom of the "carnal mind" which is "enmity against God" and which is "not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can it be" (Romans 8:7). Wherever the "carnal mind" is, there is "the world"; so that worldliness is the world without God.

2. We profit from the Word, when we learn that the world is an enemy to be resisted and overcome. The Christian is bidden to "fight the good fight of faith" (1 Timothy 6:12), which implies that there are foes to be met and vanquished. As there is the Holy Trinity—the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit; so also is there an evil trinity—the flesh, the world, and the Devil. The child of God is called to engage in a mortal combat with them; "mortal", we say, for either they will destroy him, or he will get the victory over them. Settle it, then, in your mind, my reader, that the world is a deadly enemy, and if you do not vanquish it in your heart then you are no child of God, for it is written "Whoever is born of God overcomes the world" (1 John 5:4).

Out of many, the following reasons may be given as to why the world must be "overcome."

FIRST, all its alluring objects tend to divert the attention and alienate the affections of the soul from God. Necessarily so, for it is the tendency of things seen to turn the heart away from things unseen.

SECOND, the spirit of the world is diametrically opposed to the Spirit of Christ; therefore did the apostle write, "Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God" (1 Corinthians 2:12). The Son of God came into the world, but "the world knew him not" (John 1:10); therefore did its "princes" and rulers crucify Him (1 Corinthians 2:8).

THIRD, its concerns and cares are hostile to a devout and heavenly life. Christians, like the rest of mankind, are required by God to labor six days in the week; but while so employed they need to be constantly on their guard, lest covetous interests govern them rather than the performance of duty.

"This is the victory that overcomes the world, even our faith" (1 John 5:4). Nothing but a God-given faith can overcome the world. But as the heart is occupied with invisible yet eternal realities, it is delivered from the corrupting influence of worldly objects. The eyes of faith discern the things of sense in their real colors, and see that they are empty and vain, and not worthy to be compared with the great and glorious objects of eternity! A felt sense of the perfections and presence of God makes the world appear less than nothing. When the Christian views the Divine Redeemer dying for his sins, living to intercede for his perseverance, reigning and overruling things for his final salvation—he exclaims: "There is none upon earth that I desire beside You!"

And how is it with you as you read these lines? You may cordially assent to what has just been said in the last paragraph, but how is it with you actually? Do the things which are so highly valued by the unregenerate charm and enthrall you? Take away from the worldling those things in which he delights, and he is wretched—is this so with you? Or, are your present joy and satisfaction found in objects which can never be taken from you? Treat not these questions lightly, we beseech you, but ponder them seriously in the presence of God. The honest answer to them will be an index to the real state of your soul, and will indicate whether or not you are deceived in supposing yourself to be "a new creature in Christ Jesus."

3. We profit from the Word, when we learn that Christ died to deliver us from "this present evil world" (Galatians 1:4). The Son of God came here, not only . . .

to "fulfill" the requirements of the law (Matthew 5:17), to "destroy the works of the devil" (1 John 3:8), to deliver us "from the wrath to come" (1 Thessalonians 1:10), to save us from our sins (Matthew 1:21), but also to free us from the bondage of this world, to deliver the soul from its enthralling influence.

This was foreshadowed of old in God's dealings with Israel. They were slaves in Egypt, and "Egypt" is a figure of the world. They were in cruel bondage, spending their time in making bricks for Pharaoh. They were unable to free themselves. But Jehovah, by His mighty power, emancipated them, and brought them forth out of the "iron furnace." Thus does Christ with His own. He breaks the power of the world over their hearts. He makes them independent of it, that they neither court its favors nor fear its frowns.

Christ gave Himself as a sacrifice for the sins of His people that, in consequence thereof, they might be delivered from the damning power and governing influence of all that is evil in this present world:

from Satan, who is its prince;

from the lusts which predominate in it;

from the empty way of life of the men who belong to it.

And the Holy Spirit indwelling the saints co-operates with Christ in this blessed work. He turns their thoughts and affections away from earthly things to heavenly. By the working of His power, He frees them from the demoralizing influence which surrounds them, and conforms them to the heavenly standard. And as the Christian grows in grace he recognizes this, and acts accordingly, he seeks yet fuller deliverance from this "present evil world," and begs God to free him from it completely. That which once charmed him, now nauseates him. He longs for the time when he shall be taken out of this evil world where his blessed Lord is so grievously dishonored.

4. We profit from the Word, when our hearts are weaned from it. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world" (1 John 2:15). "What the stumbling-block is to the traveler in the way, the weight to the runner, the lime twigs to the bird in its flight—so is the love of the world to a Christian in his course—either wholly diverting him from, greatly enticing him in, or forcibly turning him out of it" (Nathaniel Hardy, 1660). The truth is that until the heart is purged from this corruption, the ear will be deaf to Divine instruction. Not until we are lifted above the things of time and sense, can we be subdued unto obedience to God. Heavenly truth glides off a carnal mind, as water from a spherical body.

The world has turned its back upon Christ, and though His name is professed in many places, yet will it have nothing to do with Him. All the desires and designs of worldlings are for the gratification of self. Let their aims and pursuits be as varied as they may, self being supreme—everything is subordinated to the pleasing of self. Now Christians are in the world, and cannot get out of it; they have to live the Lord's appointed time in it. While here they have to earn their living, support their families, and attend to their worldly business. But they are forbidden to love the world, as though it could make them happy. Their "treasure" and "portion" are to be found elsewhere.

The world appeals to every instinct of fallen man. It contains a thousand objects to charm him: they attract his attention, the attention creates a desire for and love of them, and insensibly yet surely they make deeper and deeper impressions on his heart. It has the same fatal influence on all classes. But attractive and appealing as its varied objects may be, all the pursuits and pleasures of the world, are designed and adapted to promote the happiness of this life only therefore, "What shall it profit a man if he should gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" The Christian is taught by the Spirit, and through His presenting of Christ to the soul, his thoughts are diverted from the world. Just as a little child will readily drop a dirty object when something more pleasing is offered to it, so the heart which is in communion with God will say, "I count all things loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord... and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ" (Philippians 3:8).

5. We profit from the Word, when we walk in separation from the world. "Don't you know that friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whoever will be a friend of the world, is the enemy of God" (James 4:4). Such a verse as this ought to search every one of us through and through, and make us tremble. How can I fraternize with, or seek my pleasure in, that which condemned the Son of God? If I do, that at once identifies me with His enemies. Oh, my reader, make no mistake upon this point. It is written, "If any man loves the world, the love of the Father is not in him" (1 John 2:15).

Of old it was said of the people of God that they "shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations" (Numbers 23:9). Surely the disparity of character and conduct, the desires and pursuits, which distinguish the regenerate from the unregenerate—must separate the one from the other. We who profess . . .

to have our citizenship in another world, to be guided by another Spirit, to be directed by another rule, and to be journeying to another country

—cannot go arm in arm with those who despise all such things! Then let everything in and about us exhibit the character of Christian pilgrims. May we indeed be "men wondered at" (Zechariah 3:8) because "not conformed to this world" (Romans 12:2).

6. We profit from the Word, when we evoke the hatred of the world. What pains are taken in the world to save appearances and keep up a seemly and good state! Its conventionalities and civilities, its courtesies and charities—are so many contrivances to give an air of respectability to it. So too its churches and cathedrals, its priests and prelates—are needed to gloss over the corruption which seethes beneath the surface. And to make good weight "Christianity" is added, and the holy name of Christ is taken upon the lips by thousands who have never taken His "yoke" upon them. Of them God says, "This people draws near unto me with their mouth and honors me with their lips, but their heart is far from me" (Matthew 15:8).

And what is to be the attitude of all real Christians toward such? The answer of Scripture is plain:

"From such turn away" (2 Timothy 3:5)

"Come out from among them, and be separate, says the Lord" (2 Corinthians 6:17).

And what will follow when this Divine command is obeyed? Why, then we shall prove the truth of those words of Christ: "If you were of the world, the world would love it's own; but because you are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hates you (John 15:19). Which "world" is specifically in view here? Let the previous verse answer: "If the world hates you, you know that it hated me before it hated you."

What "world" hated Christ and hounded Him to death? The religious world—those who pretended to be most zealous for God's glory. So it is now. Let the Christian turn his back upon a Christ-dishonoring Christendom, and his fiercest foes and most relentless and unscrupulous enemies will be those who claim to be Christians themselves! But "Blessed are you when men shall revile you, and persecute you ... for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad!" (Matthew 5:11,12).

Ah, my brother, it is a healthy sign, a sure mark that you are profiting from the Word, when the religious world hates you. But if, on the other hand, you still have a "good standing" in all the "churches"—then there is grave reason to fear that you love the praise of men more than that of God!

7. We profit from the Word, when we are elevated above the world.

FIRST, above its customs and fashions. The worldling is a slave to the prevailing habits and styles of the day. Not so the one who is walking with God; his chief concern is to be "conformed to the image of his Son."

SECOND, above its cares and sorrows. Of old it was said of the saints that they took joyfully the confiscation of their goods, knowing that they had "in Heaven a better and an enduring substance" (Hebrews 10:34).

THIRD, above its temptations. What attraction has the glare and glitter of the world for those who are "delighting themselves in the Lord?" None whatever!

FOURTH, above its opinions and approvals. Have you learned to be independent of and defy the world? If your whole heart is set upon pleasing God, you will be quite unconcerned about the frowns of the godless.

Now, my reader, do you really wish to measure yourself by the contents of this chapter? Then seek honest answers to the following questions.

First, what are the objects before your mind in times of recreation? What do your thoughts most run upon?

Second, what are the objects of your choice? When you have to decide how to spend an evening, what do you select?

Third, which occasions you the most sorrow: the loss of earthly things, or lack of communion with God? Which causes greater grief (or chagrin); the spoiling of your plans, or the coldness of your heart to Christ?

Fourth, what is your favorite topic of conversation? Do you hanker after the news of the day—or to meet with those who talk of the altogether lovely One?

Fifth, do your "good intentions" materialize—or are they nothing but empty dreams? Are you spending more or less time than formerly on your knees? Is the Word sweeter to your taste—or has your soul lost its relish for it?

The Scriptures and the PROMISES

The Divine promises make known the good pleasure of God's will to His people to bestow upon them the riches of His grace. They are the outward testimonies of His heart, who from all eternity loves them and fore-appointed all things for them and concerning them. In the person and work of His Son, God has made an all-sufficient provision for their complete salvation, both for time and for eternity. To the intent that they might have a true, clear and spiritual knowledge of the same, it has pleased the Lord to set it before them in the exceeding great and precious promises which are scattered up and down in the Scriptures as so many stars in the glorious firmament of grace. By these precious promises, they may be assured of the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning them, and take sanctuary in Him accordingly, and through this medium have real communion with Him in His grace and mercy at all times, no matter what their case or circumstances may be.

The Divine promises are so many declarations to bestow some good, or remove some ill. As such they are a most blessed making known and manifesting of God's love to His people. There are three steps in connection with God's love:

first, His inward purpose to exercise it;

the last, the real execution of that purpose;

but in between there is the gracious making known of that purpose to the beneficiaries not only show His love fully to them in due time, but in the interim He will have us informed of His benevolent designs, that we may sweetly rest in His love, and stretch ourselves comfortably upon His sure promises. There we are able to say, "How precious also are your thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them" (Psalm 139:17).

In 2 Peter 1:4 the Divine promises are spoken of as "exceedingly great and precious." As Spurgeon pointed out, "greatness and preciousness seldom go together, but in this instance they are united in an exceeding degree". When Jehovah is pleased to open

His mouth and reveal His heart, He does so in a manner worthy of Himself, in words of superlative power and richness. To quote again the beloved London pastor:

"They come from a great God,
they come to great sinners,
they work for us great results, and deal with great matters."

While the natural intellect is capable of perceiving much of their greatness—only the renewed heart can taste their ineffable preciousness, and say with David, "How sweet are your words unto my taste! yes, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" (Psalm 119:103).

1. We profit from the Word when we perceive to whom the promises belong. They are available Only to those who are in Christ. "For all the promises of God in him [the Lord Jesus] are yes, and in him Amen" (2 Corinthians 1:20). There can be no communion between the thrice holy God and sinful creatures, except through a Mediator who has satisfied Him on their behalf. Therefore must that Mediator receive from God all good for His people, and they must have it at second hand through Him. A sinner might just as well petition a tree, as call upon God for mercy while he despises and rejects Christ.

Both the promises and the things promised, are made over to the Lord Jesus and conveyed unto the saints from Him. "This is the [chief and grandest] promise that he has promised us, even eternal life" (1 John 2:25); and as the same epistle tells us, "This life is in his Son" (1 John 5:11).

This being so, what good can they who are not yet in Christ have by the promises? None at all. A man out of Christ is out of the favor of God, yes, he is under His wrath; the Divine threatenings and not the promises, are his portion. Solemn, solemn consideration is it that those who are "without Christ" and "and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world" (Ephesians 2:12). Only "the children of God" are "the children of the promise" (Romans 9:8). Make sure, my reader, that you are one of them.

How terrible, then, is the blindness and how great is the sin of those preachers who indiscriminately apply the Divine promises to the saved and unsaved alike! They are not only taking "the children's bread" and casting it to the "dogs"—but they are "handling the word of God deceitfully" (2 Corinthians 4:2), and beguiling immortal souls! And those who listen to and heed them are little less guilty, for God holds all responsible to search the Scriptures for themselves, and test whatever they read or hear by that unerring standard. If they are too lazy to do so, and prefer blindly to follow their blind guides—then their blood is on their own heads. Truth has to be "bought" (Proverbs 23:23), and those who are unwilling to pay the price must go without it.

2. We profit from the Word when we labor to make the promises of God our own. To do this we must first take the trouble to become really acquainted with them. It is surprising how many promises there are in Scripture which the saints know nothing about—the more so seeing that they are the peculiar treasure of believers, the substance of faith's heritage lying in them. True, Christians are already the recipients of wondrous blessings—yet the capital of their heavenly wealth and the bulk of their glorious estate, is only prospective. They have already received a "pledge," but the better part of what Christ has purchased for them lies yet in the promise of God. How diligent, then, should they be in studying His testamentary will, familiarizing themselves with the good things which the Spirit "has revealed" (1 Corinthians 2:10), and seeking to take an inventory of their spiritual treasures!

Not only must I search the Scriptures to find out what has been made over to me by the everlasting covenant, but I need also to meditate upon the promises, to turn them over and over in my mind, and cry unto the Lord for spiritual understanding of them. The bee would not extract honey from the flowers as long as he only gazed upon them. Nor will the Christian derive any real comfort and strength from the Divine promises until his faith lays hold of and penetrates to the heart of them. God has given no assurance that the slothful shall be fed, but He has declared, "the soul of the diligent shall be made fat" (Proverbs 13:4). Therefore did Christ say, "Labor not for the food which perishes, but for that food which endures unto everlasting life" (John 6:27). It is only as the promises are stored up in our minds, that the Spirit brings them to remembrance at those seasons of fainting when we most need them.

3. We profit from the Word when we recognize the blessed scope of God's promises. "A sort of affectation prevents some Christians from seeking religion, as if its sphere lay among the commonplaces of daily life. It is to them transcendental and dreamy; rather a creation of pious fiction than a matter of fact. They believe in God, after a fashion, for things spiritual, and for the life which is to be; but they totally forget that true godliness has the promise of the life which now is, as well as that which is to come. To them it would seem almost profanation to pray about the small matters of which daily life is made up. Perhaps they will be startled if I venture to suggest that this should make them question the reality of their faith. If it cannot bring them help in the little troubles of life, will it support them in the greater trials of death?" (Spurgeon).

"Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come" (1 Timothy 4:8). Reader, do you really believe this, that the promises of God cover every aspect and particular of your daily life? Or have the "Dispensationalists" deluded you into supposing that the Old Testament belongs only to fleshly Jews, and that "our promises" respect spiritual and not material blessings? How many a Christian has derived comfort from "I will never leave you, nor forsake you" (Hebrews 13:5); well, that is a quotation from Joshua 1:5! So, too, 2 Corinthians 7:1 speaks of "having these promises," yet one of them, referred to in 2 Corinthians 6:18, is taken from the book of Leviticus!

Perhaps someone asks, "But where am I to draw the line? Which of the Old Testament promises rightfully belong to me?" We answer that Psalm 84:11 declares, "The Lord will give grace and glory; no good thing will He withhold from those who walk uprightly". If you are really walking "uprightly" you are entitled to appropriate that blessed promise and count upon the Lord giving you whatever "good thing" is truly required by you. "My God shall supply all your needs according to his glorious riches in Christ Jesus!" (Philippians 4:19). If then there is a promise anywhere in His Word which just fits your present case and situation—then make it your own as suited to your need. Steadfastly resist every attempt of Satan to rob you of any portion of your Father's Word.

4. We profit from the Word when we make a proper discrimination between the promises of God. Many of the Lord's people are frequently guilty of spiritual theft, by which we mean that they appropriate to themselves something to which they are not entitled, but which belongs to another. "Certain covenant engagements, made with the Lord Jesus Christ, as to His elect and redeemed ones, are altogether without condition so far as we are concerned; but many other wealthy words of the Lord contain stipulations which must be carefully regarded—or we shall not obtain the blessing. One part of my reader's diligent search must be directed toward this most important point. God will keep His promise to you; only see to it that the way in which He conditions His engagement is carefully observed by you. Only when we fulfill the requirements of a conditional promise, can we expect that promise to be fulfilled to us" (Spurgeon).

Many of the Divine promises are addressed to particular characters—or, more correctly speaking, to particular graces. For example, in Psalm 25:9, the Lord declares that "He guides the humble in what is right and teaches them his way." But if I am out of communion with Him, if I am following a course of self-will, if my heart is haughty—then I am not justified in taking to myself the comfort of this verse.

Again, in John 15:7, the Lord tells us, "If you abide in me, and my words abide in you—then you shall ask what you will, and it shall be done unto you." But if I am not in experimental communion with Him, if His commands are not regulating my conduct—then my prayers will remain unanswered.

While God's promises proceed from pure grace, yet it ever needs to be remembered that grace reigns "through righteousness" (Romans 5:21) and never sets aside human responsibility. If I ignore the laws of health, I must not be surprised that sickness prevents me enjoying many of God's temporal mercies. In the same way, if I neglect His precepts I have only myself to blame if I fail to receive the fulfillment of many of His promises.

Let none suppose that by His promises God has obligated Himself to ignore the requirements of His holiness—He never exercises any one of His perfections at the expense of another. And let none imagine that God would be magnifying the sacrificial work of Christ, were He to bestow its fruits upon impenitent and careless souls. There is a balance of truth to be preserved here. Alas, that it is now so frequently lost, and that under the pretense of exalting Divine grace, men are really turning it into a license to sin.

How often one hears quoted, "Call upon me in the day of trouble, and I will deliver you" (Psalm 50:15). But that verse begins with "And," and the preceding clause is "Pay your vows unto the most High!"

Again, how frequently is "I will guide you with my eye" (Psalm 32:8) seized by people who pay no attention to the context! But that is God's promise to one who has confessed his "transgression" unto the Lord (verse 5).

If, then, I have unconfessed sin on my conscience, and have leaned on an arm of flesh or sought help from my fellows, instead of waiting only on God (Psalm 62:5)—then I have no right to count upon the Lord's guiding me with His eye—which necessarily presupposes that I am walking in close communion with Him, for I cannot see the eye of another while at a distance from him.

5. We profit from the Word when we are enabled to make God's promises our support and stay. This is one reason why God has given them to us; not only to manifest His love by making known His benevolent designs—but also to comfort our hearts and develop our faith. Had God so pleased He could have bestowed His blessings without giving us notice of His purpose. The Lord might have given us all the mercies we need without pledging Himself to do so. But in that case we could not have been believers; faith without a promise would be a foot without ground to stand upon. Our tender Father planned that we should enjoy His gifts twice over: first by faith, and then by fruition. By this means He wisely weans our hearts away from things seen and perishing, and draws them onward and upward to those things which are spiritual and eternal.

If there were no promises there would not only be no faith, but no hope either. For what is hope but the expectation of the things which God has declared He will give us? Faith looks to the Word promising—and hope looks to the performance thereof.

Thus it was with Abraham: "Who against hope believed in hope . . . and being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about a hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb; he staggered not . . . through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God" (Romans 4:18, 20).

Thus it was with Moses: "Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward" (Hebrews 11:26).

Thus it was with Paul: "I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told to me" (Acts 27:25).

Is it so with you, dear reader? Are the promises of Him who cannot lie, the resting-place of your poor heart?

6. We profit from the Word when we patiently await the fulfillment of God's promises. God promised Abraham a son, but he waited many years for the performance of it. Simeon had a promise that he should not see death until he had seen the Lord's Christ (Luke 2:26), yet it was not made good until he had one foot in the grave.

There is often a long and hard winter between the sowing-time of prayer and the reaping of the answer. The Lord Jesus Himself has not yet received a full answer to the prayer He made in John chapter 17, nineteen hundred years ago. Many of the best of God's promises to His people will not receive their richest accomplishment until they are in glory. He who has all eternity at His disposal needs not to hurry. God often makes us tarry so that patience may have "her perfect work," yet let us not distrust Him. "For the revelation awaits an appointed time; it speaks of the end and will not prove false. Though it lingers, wait for it; it will certainly come and will not delay." (Habakkuk 2:3).

"These all died in faith, not having received the [fulfillment of the] promises but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them" (Hebrews 11:13). Here is comprehended the whole work of faith: knowledge, trust, and loving adherence.

The "afar off" refers to the things promised; those they "saw" with the mind, discerning the substance behind the shadow, discovering in them the wisdom and goodness of God.

They were "persuaded"—they doubted not, but were assured of their participation in them, and knew they would not disappoint them.

"Embraced them" expresses their delight and veneration, the heart cleaving to them with love and cordially welcoming and entertaining them. The promises were the comfort and the stay of their souls in all their wanderings, temptations and sufferings.

Various ends are accomplished by God in delaying His execution of the promises. Not only is faith put to the proof, so that its genuineness may the more clearly appear. Not only is patience developed, and hope given opportunity for exercise; but submission to the Divine will is fostered. "The weaning process is not yet fully accomplished—we are still hankering after the comforts which the Lord intends us forever to outgrow. Abraham made a great feast when his son Isaac was weaned; and, perhaps, our heavenly Father will do the same with us. Lie down, proud heart. Leave your idols; forsake your fond doings; and the promised peace will come unto you" (Spurgeon).

7. We profit from the Word when we make a right use of the promises.

FIRST, in our dealings with God Himself. When we approach unto His throne, it should be to plead one of His promises. They are to form not only the foundation for our faith to rest upon, but also the substance of our requests. We must ask according to God's will, if we are to be heard; and His will is revealed in those good things which He has declared He will bestow upon us. Thus we are to lay hold of His pledged assurances, spread them before Him, and say, "Do as you have said." (2 Samuel 7:25).

Observe how Jacob pleaded the promise in Genesis 32:12;

Moses in Exodus 32:13;

David in Psalm 119:58;

Solomon in 1 Kings 8:25;

and you also, my Christian reader, do like-wise.

SECOND, in the life we live in the world. In Hebrews 11:13, we not only read of the patriarchs discerning, trusting, and embracing the Divine promises—but we are also informed of the effects which they produced upon them: "they confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims in the earth," which means they made a public avowal of their faith. They acknowledged (and by their conduct demonstrated) that their interests were not in the things of this world; they had a satisfying portion in the promises they had appropriated. Their hearts were set upon things above; for where a man's heart is, there will his treasure be also.

"Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God" (2 Corinthians 7:1). That is the effect they should produce in us, and will if faith really lays hold of them. "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises—that by these you might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust" (2 Peter 1:4).

Now the Gospel and the precious promises, being graciously bestowed and powerfully applied—have an influence on purity of heart and behavior, and teach men to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly. Such are the powerful effects of gospel promises under the Divine influence as to make men inwardly partakers of the Divine nature and outwardly to abstain from and avoid the prevailing corruptions and vices of the times.

The Scriptures and JOY

The ungodly are ever seeking after joy, but they do not find it—they busy and weary themselves in the pursuit of it, yet all in vain. Their hearts being turned away from the Lord, they look downward for joy, where it is not. Rejecting the substance, they diligently run after the shadow—only to be mocked by it. It is the sovereign decree of Heaven that nothing can make sinners truly happy but God in Christ; but this they will not believe, and therefore they go from creature to creature, from one broken cistern to another, inquiring where the best joy is to be found. Each worldly thing which attracts them says, "It is found in me!" but soon it disappoints. Nevertheless, they go on seeking it afresh today in the very thing which deceived them yesterday.

If after many trials they discover the emptiness of one creature comfort, then they turn to another, only to verify our Lord's word, "Whoever drinks of this water, shall thirst again" (John 4:13).

Going now to the other extreme, there are some Christians who suppose it to be sinful to rejoice. No doubt many of our readers will be surprised to hear this, but let them be thankful they have been brought up in sunnier surroundings, and bear with us while we labor with those less favored. Some have been taught, largely by implication and example, rather than by plain inculcation—that it is their duty to be gloomy. They imagine that feelings of joy are produced by the Devil appearing as an angel of light. They conclude that it is well-near a species of wickedness to be happy in such a world of sin as we are in. They think it presumptuous to rejoice in the knowledge of sins forgiven, and if they see young Christians so doing, they tell them it will not be long before they are floundering in the Slough of Despond. To all such we tenderly urge the prayerful pondering of the remainder of this chapter.

"Rejoice evermore" (1 Thessalonians 5:16). It surely cannot be unsafe to do what God has commanded us. The Lord has placed no embargo on rejoicing. No, it is Satan who strives to make us hang up our harps. There is no precept in Scripture bidding us "Grieve in the Lord always—and again I say, Grieve"; but there is an exhortation which bids us, "Rejoice in the Lord, O you righteous; for praise is lovely for the upright" (Psalm 33:1).

Reader, if you are a real Christian (and it is high time you tested yourself by Scripture and made sure of this point), then Christ is yours, all that is in Him is yours. He bids you "Eat, O friends! Drink, yes, drink abundantly, O beloved" (Song of Solomon 5:1). The only sin you may commit against His banquet of love, is to stint yourself. "Let your soul delight itself in fatness" (Isaiah 55:2) is spoken not to those already in Heaven but to saints still on earth. This leads us to say that:

1. We profit from the Word when we perceive that joy is a DUTY. "Rejoice in the Lord always. I will say it again: Rejoice!" (Philippians 4:4). The Holy Spirit here speaks of rejoicing as a personal, present and permanent duty for the people of God to carry out. The Lord has not left it to our option whether we should be glad or sad, but has made happiness an obligation. Not to rejoice, is a sin of omission.

Next time you meet with a radiant Christian, do not chide him, you dwellers in Doubting Castle—but chide yourselves. Instead of being ready to call into question the Divine spring of his mirth, judge yourself for your doleful state.

It is not a carnal joy which we are here urging, by which we mean a joy which comes from carnal sources. It is useless to seek joy in earthly riches, for frequently they take to themselves wings and fly away! Some seek their joy in the family circle, but that remains entire for only a few years at most. No, if we are to "rejoice evermore" it must be in an object that lasts for evermore.

Nor is it a fanatical joy we have reference to. There are some with an excitable nature who are happy only when they are half out of their minds—but terrible is the reaction. No, it is an intelligent, steady, heart delight in God Himself. Every attribute of God, when contemplated by faith, will make the heart sing. Every doctrine of the Gospel, when truly apprehended, will call forth gladness and praise.

Joy is a matter of Christian duty. Perhaps the reader is ready to exclaim, "My emotions of joy and sorrow are not under my control—I cannot help being glad or sad as circumstances dictate."

But we repeat, "Rejoice in the Lord" is a Divine command, and to a large extent obedience to it lies in one's own power. I am responsible to control my emotions. True I cannot help being sorrowful in the presence of sorrowful thoughts, but I can refuse to let my mind dwell upon them. I can pour out my heart for relief unto the Lord, and cast my burden upon Him. I can seek grace to meditate upon His goodness, His promises, and the glorious future awaiting me. I have to decide whether I will go and stand in the light, or hide among the shadows. Not to rejoice in the Lord is more than an innocent character trait—it is a fault which needs to be confessed and forsaken.

2. We profit from the Word when we learn the SECRET of true joy. That secret is revealed in 1 John 1:3,4 "Truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ. We write these things unto you, that your joy may be full." When we consider the littleness of our fellowship with God, and the shallowness of it—it is not to be wondered at that so many Christians are comparatively joyless.

We sometimes sing, "Oh happy day that fixed my choice on You, my Savior and my God! Well may this glowing heart rejoice and tell its raptures all abroad." Yes, but if that happiness is to be maintained, there must be a continued steadfast occupation of the heart and mind with Christ. It is only where there is much faith and consequent love, that there is much joy.

"Rejoice in the Lord always." There is no other object in which we can rejoice "always." Everything else varies and is inconstant. What pleases us today, may pall on us tomorrow. But the Lord is always the same, to be enjoyed in seasons of adversity as much as in seasons of prosperity. As an aid to this, the very next verse says, "Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand" (Philippians 4:5). Be temperate in connection with all external things. Do not be captivated with them when they seem most pleasing, nor troubled when they seem most displeasing. Do not be exalted when the world smiles upon you, nor dejected when it scowls at you. Maintain a firm indifference to outward comforts. Why be so occupied with them, when the Lord Himself "is at hand"? If persecution is violent, if temporal losses are heavy—the Lord is "a very present help in times of trouble" (Psalm 46:1). He is ready to support and comfort those who cast themselves upon Him. He will care for you, so "be anxious for nothing" (Philippians 4:6). Worldlings are haunted with carking cares, but the Christian should not be.

"These things have I spoken unto you, that My joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full" (John 15:11). As these precious words of Christ are pondered by the mind and treasured in the heart, they cannot but produce joy. A rejoicing heart comes from an increasing knowledge of, and love for the truth as it is in Jesus.

"Your words were found, and I ate them; and your word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart!" (Jeremiah 15:16). Yes, it is by feeding and feasting upon the words of the Lord that the soul is made fat, and we are made to sing and make melody in our hearts unto Him.

"Then I will go unto the altar of God—unto God my exceeding joy" (Psalm 43:4). As Spurgeon well said, "With what exultation should believers draw near unto Christ, who is the antitype of the altar! Clearer light should give greater intensity of desire. It was not the altar as such that the Psalmist cared for, for he was no believer in the heathenism of ritualism; his soul desired spiritual fellowship, fellowship with God Himself in very deed. What are all the rites of worship, unless the Lord is in them? What, indeed, but empty shells and dry husks!

Note the holy rapture with which David regards his Lord! He is not his joy alone—but his exceeding joy. He is not only the fountain of joy, or the giver of joy, or the maintainer of joy—but that joy itself! The margin has it, "The gladness of my joy"; that is, the soul, the essence, the very heart of my joy."

"Even though the fig trees have no blossoms, and there are no grapes on the vines; even though the olive crop fails, and the fields lie empty and barren; even though the flocks die in the fields, and the cattle barns are empty—yet I will rejoice in the LORD! I will be joyful in the God of my salvation!" (Habakkuk 3:17,18). This joy is something of which the worldling knows nothing; alas, that it is an experience to which so many professing Christians are strangers! It is in God that the fount of spiritual and everlasting joy originates; from Him it all flows forth. This was acknowledged of old by the Church when she said, "All my springs of joy are in you!" (Psalm 87:7). Happy is the soul who has been truly taught this secret!

3. We profit from the Word when we are taught the great VALUE of joy. Joy is to the soul what wings are to the bird, enabling us to soar above the things of earth. This is brought out plainly in Nehemiah 8:10, "The joy of the Lord is your strength." The days of Nehemiah marked a turning-point in the history of Israel. A remnant had been freed from Babylon and returned to Palestine. The Law, long ignored by the captives, was now to be established again as the rule of the newly-formed commonwealth. There had come a remembrance of the many sins of the past, and tears not unnaturally mingled with the thankfulness that they were again a nation, having a Divine worship and a Divine Law in their midst. Their leader, knowing full well that if the spirit of the people began to flag, they could not face and conquer the difficulties of their position, said to them: "This day is holy unto the Lord (this feast we are keeping is a day of devout worship; therefore, mourn not), neither be sorry, for the joy of the Lord is your strength."

Confession of sin and mourning over the same have their place, and communion with God cannot be maintained without them. Nevertheless, when true repentance has been exercised, and things put right with God, we must forget "those things which are behind" and reach forth unto "those things which are ahead" (Philippians 3:13). And we can only press forward with alacrity as our hearts are joyful.

How heavy are the steps of him who approaches the place where a loved one lies cold in death. In contrast, how energetic are his movements as he goes forth to meet his bride! Lamentation unfits for the battles of life. Where there is despair there is no longer power for obedience. If there is no joy, there can be no worship.

My dear readers, there are tasks needing to be performed, service to others requiring to be rendered, temptations to be overcome, battles to be fought; and we are only experimentally fitted for them as our hearts are rejoicing in the Lord. If our souls are resting in Christ, if our hearts are filled with a tranquil gladness—then work will be easy, duties pleasant, sorrow bearable, endurance possible.

Neither contrite remembrance of past failures nor vehement resolutions—will carry us through. If the arm is to smite with vigor, it must smite at the bidding of a light heart. Of the Savior Himself it is recorded, "Who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame" (Hebrews 12:2).

4. We profit from the Word when we attend to the ROOT of joy. The spring of joy is faith. "May the God of hope fill you with all peace and joy in believing" (Romans 15:13). There is a wondrous provision in the Gospel, both by what it takes from us and what it brings to us, to give a calm and settled glow to the Christian's heart.

It takes away the load of guilt by speaking peace to the stricken conscience.

It removes the dread of God and the terror of death which weighs on the soul while it is under condemnation.

It gives us God Himself as the portion of our hearts, as the object of our communion.

The Gospel works joy, because the soul is at rest in God. But these blessings become our own only by personal appropriation. Faith must receive them, and when it does so the heart is filled with peace and joy. And the secret of sustained joy is to keep the channel open, to continue as we began. It is unbelief which clogs the channel. If there is but little heat around the bulb of the thermometer, then it is no wonder that the mercury marks so low a degree. If there is a weak faith, then joy cannot be strong.

Daily do we need to pray for a fresh realization of the preciousness of the Gospel, a fresh appropriation of its blessed contents—and then there will be a renewing of our joy.

5. We profit from the Word when we are careful to MAINTAIN our joy. "Joy in the Holy Spirit" is altogether different from a natural buoyancy of spirit. It is the product of the Comforter dwelling in our hearts and bodies, revealing Christ to us, answering all our need for pardon and cleansing—and so Setting us at peace with God; and forming Christ in us, so that He reigns in our souls, subduing us to His control.

There are no circumstances of trial and temptation in which we may refrain from joy, for the command is, "Rejoice in the Lord always."

He who gave this command knows all about the dark side of our lives, the sins and sorrows which beset us, the "much tribulation" through which we must enter the kingdom of God.

Natural hilarity leaves the woes of our earthly lot out of its reckoning. It soon relaxes in the presence of life's hardships—it cannot survive the loss of friends or health.

But the joy to which we are exhorted is not limited to any set of circumstances or type of temperament; nor does it fluctuate with our varying moods and fortunes.

Nature may assert itself in the subjects of it, as even Jesus wept at the grave of Lazarus. Nevertheless, they can exclaim with Paul, "As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing" (2 Corinthians 6:10). The Christian may be loaded with heavy responsibilities, his life may have a series of reverses, his plans may be thwarted and his hopes blighted, the grave may close over the loved ones who gave his earthly life its cheer and sweetness—and yet, under all his disappointments and sorrows, his Lord still bids him "Rejoice."

Behold the apostles in Philippi's prison, in the innermost dungeon, with feet fast in the stocks, and backs bleeding and smarting from the terrible scourging they had received. How were they occupied? In grumbling and growling? in asking what they had done to deserve such treatment? No! At midnight Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises unto God" (Acts 16:25). There was no sin in their lives, they were walking obediently—and so the Holy Spirit was free to take of the things of Christ, and show them unto their hearts, so that they were filled to overflowing. If we are to maintain our joy, we must keep from grieving the Holy Spirit.

When Christ is supreme in the heart, joy fills it. When He is Lord of every desire, the Source of every motive, the Subjugator of every lust—then will joy fill the heart and praise ascend from the lips.

The possession of this involves taking up the cross every hour of the day; God has so ordered it that we cannot have the one without the other. Self-sacrifice, the cutting off of a right hand, the plucking out of a right eye—are the avenues through which the Spirit enters the soul, bringing with Him the joys of God's approving smile and the assurance of His love and abiding presence.

Much also depends upon the spirit in which we enter the world each day. If we expect people to pet and pamper us, disappointment will make us fretful. If we desire our pride to be ministered to, we are dejected when it is not. The secret of happiness is forgetting self and seeking to minister to the happiness of others. "It is more blessed to give, than to receive," so it is a happier thing to minister to others, than to be ministered to.

6. We profit from the Word when we are sedulous in avoiding the HINDRANCES to joy. Why is it that so many Christians have so little joy? Are they not all born children of the light and of the day? This term "light," which is so often used in Scripture to describe to us the nature of God, our relations to Him and our future destiny—is most suggestive of joy and gladness. What other thing in nature is as beneficent and beautiful as the light? "God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all (1 John 1:5). It is only as we walk with God, in the light, that the heart can truly be joyous. It is the deliberate allowing of things which mar our fellowship with Him, which chills and darkens our souls. It is the indulgence of the flesh, the fraternizing with the world, the entering of forbidden paths—which blight our spiritual lives and make us cheerless.

David had to cry, "Restore unto me the joy of your salvation" (Psalm 51:12). He had grown lax and self-indulgent. Temptation presented itself and he had no power to resist. He yielded, and one sin led to another. He was a backslider, out of touch with God. Unconfessed sin lay heavy on his conscience.

Oh my brethren and sisters, if we are to be kept from such a fall, if we are not to lose our joy, then self must be denied, and the affections and lusts of the flesh crucified. We must ever be on our watch against temptation. We must spend much time upon our knees. We must drink frequently from the Fountain of living waters. We must be fully committed to the Lord.

7. We profit from the Word when we diligently preserve the BALANCE between sorrow and joy. If the Christian faith has a marked adaptation to produce joy, it has an almost equal design and tendency to produce sorrow—a sorrow that is solemn, manly, noble. "As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing" (2 Corinthians 6:10) is the rule of the Christian's life. If faith casts its light upon our condition, our nature, our sins—then sadness must be one of the effects.

There is nothing more contemptible in itself, and there is no surer mark of a superficial character and trivial round of occupation, than unshaded gladness, that rests on no deep foundations of quiet, patient grief—grief because I know what I am and what I ought to be; grief because I look out on the world and see Hell's fire burning at the back of mirth and laughter, and know what it is that men are hurrying to.

He who is anointed with the oil of gladness above His fellows (Psalm 45:7) was also "the man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." And both of these characters are (in measure) repeated in the operations of His Gospel upon every heart that really receives it.

And if, on the one hand, by the fears it removes from us and the hopes it breathes into us, and the fellowship into which it introduces us, we are anointed with the oil of gladness; on the other hand, by the sense of our own vileness which it teaches us, by the conflict between the flesh and the Spirit, there is infused a sadness which finds expression in "O what a wretched man I am!" (Romans 7:24). These two are not contradictory, but complementary. The Lamb must be eaten with "bitter herbs" (Exodus 12:8).

The Scriptures and LOVE

In earlier chapters we have sought to point out some of the ways by which we may ascertain whether or not our reading and searching of the Scriptures are really being blessed to our souls. Many are deceived on this matter, mistaking an eagerness to acquire knowledge, for a spiritual love of the Truth (2 Thessalonians 2:10), and assuming that addition to their store of learning is the same thing as growth in grace.

A great deal depends upon the end or aim we have before us when turning to God's Word. If it is simply to familiarize ourselves with its contents and become better versed in its details—it is likely that the garden of our souls will remain barren. But if with the prayerful desire to be rebuked and corrected by the Word, to be searched by the Spirit, to conform our hearts to its holy requirements—then we may expect a Divine blessing.

In the preceding chapters we have endeavored to single out the vital things by which we may discover what progress we are making in personal godliness. Various criteria have been given, which it becomes both writer and reader honestly to measure themselves by. We have pressed such tests as:

Am I acquiring a greater hatred of sin, and a practical deliverance from its power and pollution?

Am I obtaining a deeper acquaintance with God and His Christ?

Is my prayer-life healthier?

Are my good works more abundant?

Is my obedience fuller and gladder?

Am I more separated from the world in my affections and ways?

Am I learning to make a right and profitable use of God's promises, and so delighting myself in Him that His joy is my daily strength?

Unless I can truthfully say that these are (in some measure) my experience, then it is greatly to be feared that my study of the Scriptures is profiting me little or nothing.

It hardly seems fitting that these chapters should be concluded until one has been devoted to the consideration of Christian love. The extent to which this spiritual grace is, or is not, being cultivated and regulated affords another index to the measure in which my perusal of God's Word is helping me spiritually.

No one can read the Scriptures with any measure of attention without discovering how much they have to say about love, and therefore it behooves each one of us prayerfully and carefully to ascertain whether or not his or her love is really a spiritual one, and whether it is in a healthy state and is being exercised aright.

The subject of Christian love is far too comprehensive to consider all its varied phases within the compass of a single chapter. Properly we should begin with contemplating the exercise of our love toward God and His Christ, but as this has been at least touched upon in preceding chapters we shall now waive it. Much too, might be said about the natural love which we owe to our fellow-men, who belong to the same family as we do, but there is less need to write on that theme than on what is now before our mind. Here we propose to confine our attention to spiritual love to the brethren, the brethren of Christ.

1. We profit from the Word, when we perceive the great IMPORTANCE of Christian love. Nowhere is this brought out more emphatically than in 1 Corinthians chapter 13. There the Holy Spirit tells us that though a professing Christian can speak fluently and eloquently upon Divine things—if he has not love, he is like metal, which, though it makes a noise when struck, is lifeless. That though he can prophesy, understand all mysteries and knowledge, and has faith which brings miracles to pass—yet if he is lacking in love, he is spiritually a nonentity. Yes, that though he be so benevolent as to give all his worldly possessions to feed the poor, and yield his body to a martyr's death—yet if he has not love, it profits him nothing. How high a value is here placed upon love, and how essential for me to make sure I possess it!

Said our Lord, "By this shall all men know that you are my disciples—if you have love one to another" (John 13:35). By Christ's making it the badge of Christian discipleship, we see again the great importance of love. It is an essential test of the genuineness of our profession: we cannot love Christ unless we love His brethren, for they are all bound up in the same "bundle of life" (1 Samuel 25:29) with Him. Love to those whom He has redeemed, is a sure evidence of spiritual and supernatural love to the Lord Jesus Himself. Where the Holy Spirit has wrought a supernatural birth, He will draw forth that nature into exercise, He will produce in the hearts and lives and conduct of the saints supernatural graces—one of which is loving all who are Christ's, for His sake.

2. We profit from the Word, when we learn to detect the sad PERVERSIONS of Christian love. As water will not rise above its own level, so the natural man is incapable of understanding, still less appreciating, that which is spiritual (1 Corinthians 2:14). Therefore we should not be surprised when unregenerate professors mistake human sentimentality and carnal pleasantries for spiritual love. But sad it is to see some of God's own people living on so low a plane that they confuse human amiability and affability with the queen of the Christian graces. While it is true that spiritual love is characterized by meekness and gentleness—yet is it something very different from and vastly superior to the courtesies and kindnesses of the flesh.

How many a doting father has withheld the rod from his children, under the mistaken notion that real affection for them and the chastising of them were incompatible! How many a foolish mother, who disdained all corporal punishment, has boasted that "love" rules in her home!

One of the most trying experiences of the writer, in his extensive travels, has been to spend a season in homes where the children have been completely spoiled. It is a wicked perversion of the word "love"—to apply it to moral laxity and parental looseness.

But this same pernicious idea rules the minds of many people in other connections and relations. If a servant of God rebukes their fleshly and worldly ways, if he presses the uncompromising claims of God, he is at once charged with being "lacking in love." Oh, how terribly are multitudes deceived by Satan on this important subject!

3. We profit from the Word, when we are taught the true NATURE of Christian love. Christian love is a spiritual grace abiding in the souls of the saints alongside faith and hope (1 Corinthians 13:13). It is a holy disposition wrought in them when they are regenerated (1 John 5:1). It is nothing less than the love of God shed abroad in their hearts by the Holy Spirit (Romans 5:5). It is a righteous principle which seeks the highest good of others. It is the very reverse of that principle of self-love and self-seeking which is in us by nature.

It is not only an affectionate regard of all who bear the image of Christ, but also a powerful desire to promote their welfare. It is not a fickle sentiment which is easily offended, but an abiding dynamic which "many waters" of cold indifference or "floods" of disapproval can neither quench nor drown (Song of Solomon 8:7). Though coming far short in degree, it is the same in essence as His of whom we read, "Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end" (John 13:1).

There is no safer and surer way of obtaining a right conception of the nature of Christian love, than by making a thorough study of its perfect exemplification in and by the Lord Jesus. When we say a "thorough study," we mean the taking of a comprehensive survey of all that is recorded of Him in the four Gospels, and not the limiting of ourselves to a few favorite passages or incidents. As this is done, we discover that His love was not only benevolent and magnanimous, thoughtful and gentle, unselfish and self-sacrificing, patient and unchanging; but that many other elements also entered into it.

Love could . . .

deny an urgent request (John 11:6), rebuke His mother (John 2:4), use a whip (John 2:15), severely upbraid His doubting disciples (Luke 24:25), and denounce hypocrites (Matthew 23:13-33).

Love can be stern (Matthew 16:23), yes, angry (Mark 3:5).

Spiritual love is a holy thing—it is faithful to God; it is uncompromising toward all that is evil.

4. We profit from the Word, when we discover that Christian love is a DIVINE COMMUNICATION. "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren" (1 John 3:14). "Love to the brethren is the fruit and effect of a new and supernatural birth, wrought in our souls by the Holy Spirit, as the blessed evidence of our having been chosen in Christ by the Divine Father, before the world was. To love Christ and His people—our brethren in Him, is congenial to that Divine nature He has made us the partakers of by His Holy Spirit. This love of the brethren must be a peculiar love, such as none but the regenerate are the subjects of, and which none but they can exercise, or the apostle would not have so particularly mentioned it. It is such that those who have it not are in a state of unregeneracy; so it follows, "he who loves not his brother abides in death." (Samuel Pierce).

Love for the brethren is far, far more than finding agreeable the society of those whose temperaments are similar to or whose views accord with my own. It pertains not to mere nature, but is a spiritual and supernatural thing. It is the heart being drawn out to those in whom I perceive something of Christ. Thus it is very much more than a party spirit; it embraces all in whom I can see the image of God's Son. It is, therefore, a loving them for Christ's sake, for what I see of Christ in them. It is the Holy Spirit within attracting and alluring me with Christ indwelling my brethren and sisters.

Thus real Christian love is not only a Divine gift, but is altogether dependent upon God for its invigoration and exercise. We need to pray daily that the Holy Spirit will call forth into action and manifestation, toward both God and His people, that love which He has shed abroad in our hearts.

5. We profit from the Word, when we rightly EXERCISE Christian love. This is done, not by seeking to please our brethren and ingratiate ourselves in their esteem, but when we truly seek their highest good. "By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments" (1 John 5:2). What is the real test of my personal love to God Himself? It is my keeping of His commandments (see John 14:15,21,24; 15:10,14). The genuineness and strength of my love to God are not to be measured by my words, nor by the vigor with which I sing His praises—but by my obedience to His Word. The same principle holds good in my relations with my brethren.

"By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep His commandments." If I am glossing over the faults of my brethren and sisters, if I am walking with them in a course of self-will and self-pleasing—then I am not "loving" them. "You shall not hate your brother in your heart—you shall rebuke your neighbor, and not allow sin upon him" (Leviticus 19:17). Love is to be exercised in a Divine way, and never at the expense of my failing to love God; in fact, it is only when God has His proper place in my heart, that spiritual love can be exercised by me toward my brethren. True spiritual love does not consist in gratifying them, but in pleasing God and helping them; and I can only help them in the path of God's commandments.

Petting and pampering one another is not brotherly love; exhorting one another to press forward in the race that is set before us, and speaking words (enforced by the example of our daily walk) which will encourage them to "look unto Jesus," would be much more helpful.

Brotherly love is a holy thing, and not a fleshly sentiment or a loose indifference as to the path we are treading. God's "commandments" are expressions of His love, as well as of His authority—and to ignore them, even while seeking to be kindly affectioned to one another, is not "love" at all. The exercise of love is to be in strict conformity to the revealed will of God. We are to love "in the truth" (3 John 1).

6. We profit from the Word, when we are taught the varied MANIFESTATIONS of Christian love. To love our brethren and manifest the love in all kinds of ways, is our bounden duty. But at no point can we do this more truly and effectually, and with less affectation and ostentation—than by having fellowship with them at the throne of grace. There are brethren and sisters in Christ in the four corners of the earth, about the details of whose trials and conflicts, temptations and sorrows, I know nothing. Yet I can express my love for them, and pour out my heart before God on their behalf, by earnest supplication and intercession. In no other way can the Christian more manifest his affectionate regard toward his fellow-pilgrims than by using all his interests in the Lord Jesus in their behalf, entreating His mercies and favors unto them.

"But whoever has this world's goods, and sees his brother in need, and shuts up his heart from him, how does the love of God abide in him? My little children, let us not love in word or in tongue, but in deed and in truth." (1 John 3:17,18). Many of God's people are very poor in this world's goods. Sometimes they wonder why it is so; it is a great trial to them. One reason why the Lord permits this, is that others of His saints may have their compassion drawn out and minister to their temporal needs from the abundance with which God has furnished them. Real love is intensely practical—it considers no office too base, no task too humbling, where the sufferings of a brother can be relieved. When the Lord of love was here upon earth, He had thought for the bodily hunger of the multitude and the comfort of His disciples' feet!

But there are some of the Lord's people so poor that they have very little indeed to share with others. What, then, may they do? Why, make the spiritual concerns of all the saints their own; interest themselves on their behalf at the throne of grace! We know by our own cases and circumstances what the feelings, sorrows, and complaints of other saints must be the subjects of. We know from sad experience how easy it is to give way to a spirit of discontent and murmuring. But we also know how, when we have cried unto the Lord for His quieting hand to be laid upon us, and when He has brought some precious promise to our remembrance—what peace and comfort have come to our heart. Then let us beg Him to be equally gracious to all His distressed saints. Let us seek to make their burdens our own, and weep with those who weep, as well as rejoice with those who rejoice. Thus shall we express real love for them by entreating their Lord and our Lord to remember them with everlasting kindness.

This is how the Lord Jesus is now manifesting His love to His saints: "He ever lives to make intercession for them" (Hebrews 7:25). He makes their cause and care His own. He is entreating the Father on their behalf. None is forgotten by Him—every lone sheep is borne upon the heart of the Good Shepherd. Thus, by expressing our love to the brethren in daily prayers for the supply of their varied needs, we are brought into fellowship with our great High Priest.

Not only so, but the saints will be endeared to us thereby—our very praying for them as the beloved of God will increase our love and esteem for them as such. We cannot carry them on our hearts before the throne of grace, without cherishing in our own hearts a real affection for them. The best way of overcoming a bitter spirit to a brother who has offended us, is to be much in prayer for him.

7. We profit from the Word, when we are taught the proper CULTIVATION of Christian love. We suggest two or three rules for this.

First, recognizing at the outset that just as there is much in you (in me) which will severely try the love of the brethren, so there will not be a little in them to test our love. "Be completely humble and gentle; be patient, bearing with one another in love." (Ephesians 4:2) is a great admonition on this subject which each of us needs to lay to heart. It is surely striking to note that the very first quality of spiritual love named in 1 Corinthians 13 is that it is "patient" (verse 4).

Second, the best way to cultivate any virtue or grace is to exercise it. Talking and theorizing about it avails nothing unless it be carried into action. Many are the complaints heard today about the littleness of the love which is being manifested in many places—that is all the more reason why I should seek to be a better example! Do not allow the coldness and unkindness of others to dampen your love, but "overcome evil with good" (Romans 12:21). Prayerfully ponder 1 Corinthians 13 at least once a week.

Third, above all, see to it that your own heart basks in the light and warmth of God's love. Like begets like. The more you are truly occupied with the unwearying, unfailing, unfathomable love of Christ to you—the more will your heart be drawn out in love to those who are His.

A beautiful illustration of this is found in the fact that the particular apostle who wrote most upon brotherly love, was he who leaned upon the Master's bosom. The Lord grant all requisite grace to both reader and writer (than whom none more needs to heed them) to observe these rules, to the praise of the glory of His grace, and to the good of His beloved people.
